Trudeau Didn't Ask Couve

Rossillon Affair Ignored

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday he "didn't think to ask" about the Rossillon affair in his talk Monday with French Premier Maurice Couve de Murville in Quebec City.

★ ★ ★

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield had asked whether Trudeau received satisfactory assurance from Couve de Murville regarding Philippe Rossillon, a French government official whom Trudeau has accused of acting in an underhand manner in Canada.

The affair arose out of a visit which Rossillon made last month to French-speaking Canadians in Manitoba. Rossillon is concerned with promoting French language and culture.

Stanfield was called to order by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux when he asked whether it was correct to assume that Trudeau did not consider the Rossillon affair as important now as he did Sept. 11.

That was the day the prime minister publicly castigated Rossillon at an Ottawa news conference.

★ ★ ★

In reply to a further question by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), Trudeau said he did not consider it useful to "drag a problem everywhere he goes."

Auctioneer Waives Deal After Cross-Ring Hello

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — She had no cattle, no ranch and worst of all didn't have $1,575 to pay for the bull.

The red-faced lady explained to the auctioneer at the Bluestem National Charolais Association sale she was only waving to a friend across the ring.

"Okay," sighed auctioneer George Morse, "we'll back up and take the next lowest bid."

That, of course, was her friend across the arena, waving back.

Morse called a halt to the whole thing and delivered a lecture on sitting on your hands if you don't want to buy a bull. Then he started selling the animal all over again.

Invasion Reason

Soviet Summit Shelved

From Reuters - AP

BUDAPEST — A conference of 85 Communist parties agreed Tuesday to shelve plans for a world communist conference in Moscow next month.

The decision to postpone the meeting, apparently taken because of the Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia, was a bitter blow to the Soviet Union, which has been pushing for such a meeting for years.

The last was held in Moscow in 1957.

The conference which ended here Tuesday decided to hold another meeting here Nov. 17 to re-examine date for a new communist summit. Informed opinion was that the world meeting, which had been scheduled for Nov. 25, would be held towards the end of next year.

UNITY DISPLAY

The Russians have been urging that a meeting of Communist parties throughout the world should meet in Moscow, apparently to demonstrate unity of loyal parties despite defection of Peking.

But the occupation of Czechoslovakia apparently ran into criticism from some of the parties represented here and this left the Kremlin the choice of going ahead with little support or agreeing to a postponement to save face.

Other Reds Seek Right

ROME (Reuters) — Italian and Romanian Communist party officials called Tuesday for the right of Communist parties to decide their own political lines without outside interference.

Observers said it was a rebuke to Russia for leading the Warsaw Pact intervention in Czechoslovakia — which the Italian Communist party previously condemned.

Nahmint Plane Crash

Deadhead Dips Two

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI—Two Seattle brothers are in satisfactory condition today in West Coast General Hospital after their light seaplane crashed into Nahmint Lake, about 20 miles southwest of Port Alberni, on the weekend.

Police said the accident occurred Sunday when A. V. Harmon and Louie Harmon were on their way home after visiting the Island for a fishing trip. They left Seattle Saturday morning.

Apparently they decided to stop for some more fishing and tried to land on Nahmint Lake.

Police say that a right-hand pontoon struck a deadhead when the plane flipped and sunk. The two men managed to climb clear and swam ashore. They found a cabin where they stayed Sunday and Monday night.

★ ★ ★

A search was launched Monday and RCMP were notified that they had been found at about 2 p.m. Tuesday. By 3 p.m. a search and rescue helicopter had delivered them to West Coast hospital.

A hospital spokesmen said they were suffering from hunger and exhaustion—the pair had had nothing to eat since the crash.

Apart from scratches and contusions, the spokesman said the men were not injured.

"They had a good dinner and a shave, are now resting comfortably and are in satisfactory condition," she said.

If No Leave

B.C. Post Parker Choice

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Parker, chairman of the British Columbia mediation commission, indicated Monday he will give up his job as Yukon Territorial Court judge if the federal justice department refuses to give him leave of absence.

Both Justice Minister Turner and provincial labor minister Leslie Peterson have said Judge Parker can not hold both positions.

The judge has requested a seven - year leave of absence from his Yukon post, in order to protect his pension rights. He says he would be eligible for a federal pension of $18,500 a year when he is 61, five years from now.

ENJOYING JOB

"I don't think the federal government has said its last word yet," he said Monday.

"I know I can't continue to do both jobs and will have to make a decision. I am enjoying my job as chairman of the mediation commission."

Asked if this means he will stay with the B.C. job if the justice department does not allow his requested leave of absence, Judge Parker said, "Yes. I feel I should come here but I'll take that fence when it comes."

The judgeship carries a salary of $28,000 a year, plus pension benefits. The mediation position pays $42,500, with no pension.

Since his appointment in May to the mediation post, Judge Parker has continued to draw his Yukon salary, but has accepted only expenses for his B.C. job.

Walking with wife, William Hamilton gets cheery farewell from Jubilee staff

World Series Fan All Set Metal Vertebra His Ticket

By A. R. MURPHY

Pale and frail but erect and confident, William S. Hamilton walked out of Royal Jubilee Hospital Tuesday on his way home to put his feet up and watch today's World Series opener on TV.

The 65-year-old man entered the same hospital two months ago in great pain and in the expectation that he might spend the rest of his life in bed or, at best, in a wheelchair.

★ ★ ★

His doctors did not despair, however, and the unique operation by which he was fitted with a metal vertebra is now medical history. The landmark surgery has brought inquiries and commendations from all over North America, and from as far abroad as India.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, Jubilee executive director, said Tuesday that no one had yet contradicted the claim that the operation was unique in North America and possibly the world.

"It has excited a tremendous amount of interest, and inquiries have been pouring in from all over," Dr. Pickles said.

★ ★ ★

He added that Dr. Fouad A. Hamdi, Victoria neurosurgeon, led the surgical team of doctors and nurses which worked on the operating table for six hours to replace a diseased second lumbar vertebra with a metal prosthesis.

The operation took place on Aug. 2, Dr. Pickles added, and Mr. Hamilton had a "remarkably normal and uneventful convalescence."

The patient was sitting up and eating normally 10 days after the operation, and walking with only a little help in six weeks.

He was now walking unaided and just as though his back had never been diseased, the doctor added.

Prior to the operation the patient was dragging one foot, and indication of the build-up of the injury. The drug was now gone.

The patient was cheerful and well on his departure from the hospital Tuesday.

"I am feeling fine and I hope to lead a normal, active life from now on. And, of course, I am most grateful to the doctors and nurses who took such good care of me

Fear Sparks Berlin Ban

BERLIN (UPI)—The West Berlin government Tuesday moved to ban the National Democratic Party because of fears the Russians might use its alleged neo-Nazi activities as an excuse to put pressure on the city.

The senate (city executive council) authorized Mayor Klaus Schutz to ask the Western Allies to ban the extreme right-wing party.

Bed Spread Bit Much For Royalty

LONDON (CP) — The Express today splashes across page one an eight-column picture of the Queen sitting up in bed and surrounded by Royal Family members shortly after the birth of Prince Edward in 1964, despite the Queen's request they not be displayed.

The picture is one of a set obtained originally by the French magazine Paris-Match.

Their world-wide publication, says the Express, "has created an anomaly — which can only be resolved by letting the British people see them." (See Page 28.)

"They are probably the most delightful pictures of the Royal Family ever taken."

Order-in-Council Ruling Challenged for Japanese

VANCOUVER (CP)—A federal order-in-council under which a Japanese - Canadian's property was sold during the Second World War was challenged Tuesday in Exchequer Court.

Lawyer Raymond MacLeod, appearing for Toram Iwasaki, 88, in a claim for $1,500,000 in compensation, held the order-in-council breached the legislation which authorized it.

Mr. MacLeod argued the 640 acres on Salspring Island owned by Mr. Iwasaki was confiscated by the federal government in 1942 under an order-in-council which stipulated that it would be held in trust for him.

However, another order, passed in 1945, authorized disposal of the land.

★ ★ ★

Mr. MacLeod argued before Mr. Justice F. A. Sheppard that the War Measures Act, which was the basis for both orders-in-council, states that no order passed under the act shall revoke any right or liability given in any previous order.

"I submit there was a right owing Iwasaki to have his property returned to him and an obligation on the Secretary of State acting as custodian to hold his property for him," Mr. MacLeod said.

★ ★ ★

The court action stems from events of nearly 25 years ago when 20,000 Japanese-Canadians were removed from the coastal areas of British Columbia as a security measure during the Second World War.

Mr. MacLeod said the land was sold in 1945 for $5,250, but Mr. Iwasaki had refused to accept a cheque for $4,838, net proceeds of the sale.

Hellyer Hears Renewal Protests

'Bulldozers Don't Build Homes'

TORONTO (CP) — Transport Minister Hellyer waved away reporters with tape recorders when he met placard-carrying protesters Tuesday while inspecting a proposed slum-clearance area in downtown Toronto with members of his housing study group. He said he wanted to have private talks with the people. He found them outspoken rather than hostile.

Signs saying "We don't want urban renewal" and "Bulldozers don't build houses" were carried by residents of the Trefann Court area which is to be razed for new housing.

★ ★ ★

Residents also protested that they have waited for years for street patching, but parts of Sackville Street, south of Shuter, were freshly paved by the city a few hours before Hellyer arrived.

Most of the tiny roof-slumping houses are 60 to 75 years old and many of them are owner-occupied. Residents complain they will not get a proper price for their buildings when they are expropriated and turn down.

Many renters said they don't want to move and they cannot afford better houses. They are fearful of being forced into public housing against their will.

Dining Can Be Fun And Inexpensive

BILL THOMAS' NOTEBOOK

Wednesday

DINING OUT: Eating in Victoria can be a fun thing. It can be gracious and it can be inexpensive in terms of what the same fare costs in other cities.

In the Empress Room it can be a combination of all these things with the addition of excellent service and an adequate wine list for the average bibber who wants to complement his meal rather than impress the rest of the room.

The menu is comprehensive without being confusing but it is worth ordering an aperitif while pondering the selection.

All but one of the aperitifs cost under $1 and these are three-ounce drinks. For the diner who insists on a stiffer drink before eating there are king-size martinis and manhattans at $1.57.

The most attractive thing about the Empress menu is that it stays away from steaks. Red meat buffs can opt for entrecote bearnaise but it's not just the same old thing.

This is a succulent steak, grilled and served with a bearnaise sauce. Beef also comes marinated in Madeira wine and mushrooms or as tournedos Rossini with a covering of pate de foie gras. Each dish comes well prepared and garnished for $5.90 which includes vegetables and potato.

The Empress Room has the distinct advantage of having Ireland's Jack O'Hare as a waiter. He garnishes the dishes with wit and gives the evening a special flare.

After a lot of balancing between beef and poultry we decided to try roast Cornish game hen. This comes stuffed with wild rice and is flamed in brandy at the table.

Having made that decision it was time to turn to the wine list. The white wines range from $3.15 to $6.90 unless its a special event and champagne is the order of the evening.

* * *

The best buy on the wine list is the Australian hock at $4.80 but we settled for a German Deinhard Liebfraumilch at $5.50. With the wine set to cooling it gave an opportunity to plan the other courses.

The smoked salmon is delicious and comes with capers and a bowl of horseradish along with butter and lemon toast. It costs $1.50 but is well worth it. The same thing in Seattle cost slightly more but was by no means as good.

The hors d'oeuvres list also includes crab legs, shrimps, snails or fruit salad.

Soups are funny things. Our option was for chilled Vichyssoise.

While the main course is getting the treatment in the kitchen Jack O'Hare presides at the salad bowl. He whips up a mixture of crushed garlic, olive oil and vinegar. The fresh greens get a dash of fresh ground pepper corns and then are tossed with the dressing.

The German wine had the right body to carry the white meat of the game hen, especially as it was stuffed with a well-seasoned dressing.

Nobody really wanted dessert but Jack O'Hare was adamant. He had made up his mind he was going to make crepes Brazilienne, and who is to deter a determined Irishman?

Right now diners have the added pleasure of hearing a Mexican group in the Empress Room. Los Presidentes are singing traditional songs to the accompaniment of two guitars and a string bass.

Dancing goes to the Brothers Forbes, John and Larry. There are two shows nightly at 9 and 11 p.m.

The total bill hangs around $35 for two, but this is 25 per cent less than a similar meal in Vancouver or Seattle and of course in Washington there is the 8 per cent discount on the dollar and then the state tax on meals. All in all, a night at the Empress is a good buy.

Overactive, 'Bad' Youngster Requires Expert Diagnosis

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Molner: My niece has a very difficult problem with her three-year-old son. He is very mischievous and selfish. He gets up on a chair and swings his arm at everything he can reach, on the table, dresser, or cabinet. He also takes everything apart. He has an extremely good memory, however.

He was taken to a doctor who advised sitting him on a table and holding his hands by his wrists for one hour. This has brought no results in six months. Can you recommend anything? — M. W.

It takes more than a description to know exactly what ails a child (or a grown person), but this situation sounds very much like that of a hyperkinetic child. I would most certainly have this youngster examined at a child guidance centre, a children's hospital, or a medical centre which would have experts in this field.

The hyperkinetic (or hyperactive) child is one who is driven by some inner compulsion to be doing something all the time, not necessarily constructive. He may chatter incessantly, often jumping from one activity to another.

He may spill things, bat them around, bang things, take them apart, fitter, walk around constantly, bedevil those around him. He's a problem at home; when he reaches school age, he is sometimes impossible — a "bad" child who won't respect the rights of others or the peace and rules of the school room. Yet he can't help it.

This trouble, hyperkinesis, according to experts who have studied it in depth, is far more common than anyone realizes. In varying degrees, that is. Some cases are extreme, some mild.

If this youngster we are talking about today is, indeed, hyperkinetic, holding his hands for an hour at a time will not help him; it will only frustrate him, and build up more of this scatter-gun nervous energy which he is compelled to discharge.

It takes careful analysis to distinguish these cases at times: is it real hyperkinesis, or faulty family discipline, or tension from bickering, or other domestic problems?

With real hyperkinesis, neither discipline nor punishment will do any good.

Some pediatricians and general practitioners are familiar with this problem; others are not. That is why I suggest getting an expert diagnosis when hyperkinesis is suspected. Correct control with medication can make life so much more endurable both for the child and all those around him.

Red Summit Shelved

of Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, reported the conference was split by disagreement over the invasion of Czechoslovakia.

In Moscow, observers said the decision to postpone the world summit would be a setback for the Kremlin, but not a defeat.

They said that although the parties meeting in Budapest had voted to postpone the meeting, they were unanimous in agreeing that a world conference should be held eventually.

The meeting here was held by an international committee set up in February to prepare for the Moscow conference.

UNITY QUESTION

The Soviet Union, and 57 other parties from all over the world were represented. The only parties holding power not attending were those from China, Albania, Yugoslavia, North Vietnam, North Korea and Cuba.

The final communique said the delegates had agreed on the need for a world summit, and said its object would be to examine the question of unity of all communist and workers' parties.

The communique said the delegations had decided to call another preparatory meeting here Nov. 17. "At this meeting, they will examine the date for calling the international conference and the method of its further preparations."

MORE TALKS

Between now and this meeting, the delegations would be able to hold further consultations with central committees of the Communist parties.

The communique, issued by the official Hungarian news agency MTI, said delegations at the meeting unanimously reaffirmed the need for holding a word communist summit.

Sixty-seven delegations, representing about three-quarters of the world's communist parties, attended a nine-day conference in February and March which agreed to call the Moscow summit for Nov. 25.

Those staying away from the present meeting were the parties of Canada, Ceylon, Dominican Republic, Jordan, Nicaragua, Nepal, Panama, Portugal and Norway. The Iceland party sent observers in February.

Six government Communist parties—China, Albania, Yugoslavia, North Vietnam, North Korea and Cuba—boycotted both gatherings.

An informed source said the end of next year was being suggested in delegation circles as a possible date for the new summit. It also was not certain that Moscow would remain as the venue.

Fan All Set

here. I will never forget them," Mr. Hamilton said.

Mr. Hamilton said that he was confident from the beginning that the operation would be a success.

"There surgeon explained to me in detail just what he intended to do and, although he never at any time gave me any guarantee that the operation would be successful, I had the utmost faith in his ability," he said.

The patient, who lives at 823 Macleod, said he hoped to be back at work on Dec. 1. He is a mortician.

The work done by Dick Alexander, vice-president of Kennametal of Canada Ltd., a Victoria firm, was a big factor in the success of the operation, Dr. Fickles said Tuesday.

It was realized that the insertion of a prosthesis or artificial part would give the patient a fighting chance, but it first had to be designed.

Mr. Alexander said many false starts were made before a satisfactory device was produced and, although the final product would have a manufactured price of only about $200, the prototype, because of so many hours of experimental work, cost many times $200.

The final product consists of two horseshoe-shaped rings held about 1¾ inches apart by three struts. The rings are 1¾ inches thick and are adjusted to fit over the spinal cord. Each of the rings contains four holes for screws which anchor the prosthesis to vertebrae above and below.

* * *

A major part of the operation was not only fitting the prosthesis, but chipping away old bone without damaging nearby nerve and muscle.

The work of Dr. Hundt in this case has been publicly proclaimed in a Canadian doctors' journal, The Medical Post, and the surgeon is expected to prepare a paper for the Canadian Medical Journal.

* * *

There was a holiday atmosphere at the hospital Tuesday when Mr. Hamilton departed. He was accompanied everywhere by what seemed to be an honor guard of nurses, as if they were reluctant to part with their prize patient.

Least excited of all was the patient, who took all the furore calmly and said he was really pleased to be home in time to watch the World Series in peace and comfort.

Quakes Confirmed Following Nuclear Blasts

By COLLIN McKINLEY
The Los Angeles Times

LAS VEGAS — After years of insisting that underground nuclear tests could not cause earthquakes, the Atomic Energy Commission now admits there has been a marked increase in seismic activity following big underground blasts in Nevada.

The AEC said it had noted the unusual post-shock seismic activity and although it was not felt that it was any hazard to the public, a study was undertaken.

Coincidentally, last Oct. 14 two scientists attached to the seismological laboratory at the Mackay School of Mines, University of Nevada, at Reno, briefed AEC officials on their own findings of seismic activity in the test area.

"WE TOLD AEC"

The scientists are Dr. Alan Ryall, director of the seismological laboratory and Dr. Gary Boucher, who have prepared a two-page documentation of the increased earthquake frequency around the Nevada test site.

"I don't agree that the AEC discovered all this, because we were the ones who informed them of this," Ryall said.

He said the AEC undertook the seismic study "because of the work we did here.

"I feel that this is an area that has been neglected for too long. It appeared from the briefing that this was all news to them," Ryall said.

MORE, BUT CLOSE

Ryall said he generally agreed with the AEC announcement which noted "an increase in the recorded number of low-order Seismic disturbances as compared to the number of disturbances usually observed."

The AEC said the tremors generally were limited to regions within 30 miles of Ground Zero, and were of less than 10 per cent of the energy of the nuclear blasts.

The AEC said that the possibility of triggering an earthquake at a distance of 30 to 120 miles was difficult because not enough is known about the subject. And, the AEC contended, it would be impossible to trigger any quake at such seismic areas as California's San Andreas fault which is 170 miles from the test site at its closest point.

MAJOR ISSUE

The possibility of earthquakes and earthquake damage was one of the major issues last April when the Howard Hughes organization tried to get the megaton-sized "boxcar" shot postponed for 90 days pending an independent evaluation of nuclear shot hazards.

The big test was fired as planned on April 26 without any resulting damage, but with plenty of post-shot seismic activity, Ryall reported.

The AEC pointed out in its statement that earthquakes are caused by strains of earth slippage being built up over tens of years, then suddenly released.

Without this buildup of stress, there would be no quake, and a man-made explosion cannot in itself cause the quakes, the AEC contends.

Key To Feminine Response in Marriage

Over the centuries, millions of women have been unjustly labeled —or thought themselves—"cold." New facts about a hidden muscular weakness that affects perhaps two-thirds of all women, plus a simple exercise, promise marital fulfillment to countless women who've never known it before. If you won't slow down for safety, do it for the money.

We don't mean the money you save by avoiding speeding tickets. We mean the money you save on gasoline.

The faster you drive, the more you spend on gasoline.

Look at the chart. (The figures are averages. They have been compiled by Shell and are based on a variety of cars travelling at constant speeds over level roads.)

Are you foolish and rich?

The man who drives at 80 m.p.h. has to be foolish and rich. He uses 25% more gasoline than he would at 50 m.p.h.

On a long trip his gasoline bill jumps from $20 to $25, for example. An extra $5. (Not to mention the added risk of speeding tickets and accidents.)

When you climb from sixty to eighty, your mileage drops by 15%. Just the 10 miles from seventy to eighty cuts your mileage by 8%.

As the chart shows, it's worse at the other end of the scale. It's slightly more expensive to drive at 10 m.p.h. than at 80 m.p.h.

Lessons:

1. Try to avoid the stop-and-go-crawling traffic in the city.
2. Out on the highway, settle for a comfortable fifty or sixty. It's easier on your nerves and your wallet.
3. Good mileage is more than gasoline. It starts with your car and the way you drive.

At Shell, we want everything right, so that when we fill your tank, Super Shell can really show off.

Super Shell for good mileage

Super Shell has five ingredients for good mileage.

Platformate contains extra-energy petroleum molecules.

TCP helps to keep your spark plugs from misfiring.

A detergent fights the mileage-robbing deposits that can build up inside the carburetor.

Butane helps you start quickly.

Mixed Pentanes help your engine warm up quickly to prevent misfiring, bucking, coughing and wasted fuel.

You'll go a long way on Super Shell. You'll go even farther if you follow our 32 Secrets for good mileage. It's a free book from your Shell dealer.

Land Gains Tax

THE SUGGESTION of a real property capital gains tax by Dr. Reid Elliott of the University of Victoria economics department is in line with the thinking of some of those who called recently for a study by the Union of B.C. Municipalities of land costs and speculation. The purposes differ. Dr. Elliott is concerned with the loss of potential municipal revenue. Saanich council, which submitted the UBCM resolution, had more in mind the retardation of the swift advance in property prices which has contributed so substantially to placing new homes beyond the financial reach of many people.

But the tax proposed by Dr. Reid certainly would have some effect in discouraging investment in real property for financial gain. He suggests that a tax be levied on the unearned increment when property is bought and sold: the increase in price between the first transaction and the second, less the value of any improvements made in the meantime. And further, the higher the rate of profit, the higher the rate of taxation would be under his plan; the longer the term of ownership the lower the tax rate.

There is even a similarity of purpose in one respect. Dr. Elliott's idea is to give the municipalities a further source of revenue for the expansion of services. A point made in Saanich council has been that where property is greatly increased in value by the extension of municipal services, the benefit, or some of it, ought to accrue to the municipality.

Undoubtedly therefore the capital gains tax on real estate will have some consideration in the UBCM study.

But whether the executive committee of the municipal association will find it wise, popular or practicable is something else again. Dr. Elliott's proposal appears to give too little attention to several pertinent points.

One of these is that the whole difference between buying and selling prices, allowing for improvements, is not pure profit. The property taxes paid during the period of ownership, the legal expenses, the mortgage interest if any are surely to be regarded to some extent as part of the investment.

Nor are monetary inflation and the general increase in prices to be forgotten. An owner may sell a house for several thousand dollars more than he paid for it a decade ago — but he needs those several thousand dollars to buy the equivalent again.

Even were the municipalities to find the real estate capital gains tax attractive, however, there is a further impediment. They have no power to impose it.

Dr. Elliott appears to cast a great deal of blame on municipalities for not seeking new and valid ways of raising tax money. But their revenue sources — the chief of which is property taxation — are allocated to them by the province, and income taxation is not one of them.

Could they get it by asking? The answer to this question is probably contained in Dr. Elliott's advice that the source he proposes will be snatched by senior governments if the municipalities don't get moving.

Holding the Line

THERE IS NO DENYING the courage of Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson. Some may call him stubborn; and stubborn he may be. But it is a stubbornness of the bulldog variety, a tenacity of purpose, a defiance in the face of odds which are, in fact, a national characteristic.

In the face of disturbing losses to the Conservatives in national byelections and municipal contests, and of reproaches from the recent Trades Union Congress' 100th anniversary convention in Blackpool, he appears determined to continue his controversial policies of wage and price controls.

He refuses to be dissuaded even by Monday's Labor Party convention vote of nearly 5 to 1 condemning his anti-inflationary curbs designed, as he says, to restore national solvency.

His critics mustered 5,088,000 votes against 1,124,000 for repeal of wage control legislation.

If anything more were needed, this reverse clearly shows the deep division within the Labor Party. Men like Mr. Michael Foot, leader of the leftist faction, have rallied powerful support with the cry for the defence of the rights of trades unions which have been denied by Mr. Wilson's control legislation.

In the Labor Party manifesto of Sept. 28, the authors suggest: "There are certain ranges where income tax bears very heavily. And if incomes are to be relieved new ways of raising public revenue must be found. We therefore propose to look again at the possibilities of taxing wealth."

Fighting for his life and the life of the government, the prime minister replied to this, and other proposals contained in the majority-supported party manifesto:

"If because of the views expressed (in the manifesto) we were now, in midstream, to abandon these policies there is no one here (at the Blackpool convention) who would respect us for such a decision."

Adverse criticism, Mr. Wilson told the convention, will not kill unpopular economic measures considered necessary to restore the country's economic equilibrium.

Astonishingly, in spite of the huge vote of rejection, the left wingers failed to make the expected inroads into the party's national executive on a platform of legislative reform.

The prime minister has won another battle.

Hansard Titbits

Already Spent

HON. MARCEL LAMBERT: . . . In so far as, shall we say, the accuracy and nature of the estimates, my only comment is that of course the government has had six months' experience in refining and honing these estimates.

Mr. Diefenbaker: And in trimming the taxpayer.

Mr. Lambert: Of course the money has already been spent. The government knows what is contained in the estimates and it knows that what it will present really are not estimates. We shall be looking at some sort of quasi public accounts. I think we shall have more to say about that tomorrow.

Mr. Baldwin: We have a $400 million bill here.

Mr. Woolliams: What happened to the philosophy of pay as you go?

Mr. Baldwin: It's go as you pay.

Determined Effort by Peking

Carrying Mao's Thoughts to Africa

By ALAN CHESTER from Nairobi

THE long, snaky railway which is being planned and financed by Communist China to link the tropical, palm-fringed port of Dar es Salaam in Tanzania to landlocked Zambia, is a costly, but determined effort by Peking to carry the "thoughts" of Chairman Mao Tse-tung into Central Africa.

For the last four years, since Chinese Premier Chou En-lai made it clear in a speech in Tanzania that he thought Africa "ripe for revolution," China has been taking giant strides across the continent in an effort to impose its ideologies on emergent African nations.

The Peking Communists already have gained strong footholds in Tanzania, Burundi, Congo Brazzaville and Guinea and, to a lesser extent, in Somalia and Mali. They also are making friendly overtures to other susceptible nations.

* * *

Zanzibar, the little Indian Ocean spice island, only 40 miles from the Tanzanian mainland, is the main Chinese base in Africa.

Since the island was ripped by revolution in 1964, the Communists have enveloped it in a thick Bamboo Curtain, and it is now used as a Communist springboard from which to infiltrate the rest of the continent.

Huge portraits of Mao hang in the main streets of Zanzibar; Chinese military advisers arm and train the "People's Army," and Chinese political advisers are on hand to assist the "People's Revolutionary Council" which dictates the island's sweeping nationalization, security and other policies.

From this point the Chinese have not found it difficult to bridge the 40 miles of azure water to the mainland of Tanzania. This was made easier for them soon after the Zanzibar revolution when President Julius Nyerere arranged a "marriage" between what was then Tanganyika and Zanzibar to form the Tanzanian Republic.

* * *

Dr. Nyerere, the diminutive, though forceful Tanzanian president, is regarded as a strong idealist. He has introduced his own form of socialism into his mineral-rich country, and strongly objects to suggestions that he has been influenced by the thoughts of Mao, or by anyone else.

Like most African leaders he insists that his country follows a positive policy of non-alignment.

But his regular outbursts against the Western powers, and his ready praise for the Communist bloc, are often couched in ugly, Communist phraseology, and bear a stark similarity to similar outbursts from Peking.

It has been suggested that President Nyerere is merely using the Chinese, enticing money from them with which to develop his country. Observers compare the Chinese bid for influence to that of the British at the turn of Tanganyika's independence, which failed; or that of the Americans, which also failed.

* * *

Nyerere also showed how unpredictable he is when he recognized the breakaway state of Biafra in its civil war against Nigeria — although Nigeria had been one of the first countries to offer military aid to Tanzania at the time of the army mutiny in Tanzania.

"China might well find, eventually, that Tanzania is not as big a friend as it might think," one diplomat told me.

But it is hard to accept that China is offering $250 million to build the Tan-Zam rail link — its biggest and most expensive project in Africa—without wanting some interest.

There are now more than 1,000 Chinese in Tanzania — excluding Zanzibar — and they already have started making inroads into other parts of the continent from Dar Es Salaam.

The Chinese position in Tanzania gives the impressive Communists unimpeded access to the headquarters of African revolutionary movements which are based in the capital.

Frelimo, the active Mozambique "liberation" movement; the Zimbabwe "freedom" movement, aimed at toppling the whites in Rhodesia; the Pan-African Congress and other clandestine organizations plotting against South Africa — all open their doors willingly to the promise of aid from Peking.

China emerges strongly in countries torn by revolution. This has been particularly evident in Africa in countries like Zanzibar, Congo Brazzaville and Burundi, and by paying court to the dissident revolutionary movements China is hoping to gain influence in the event of a further upheaval in southern Africa.

As well as financing these exiled "liberation" organizations in Dar es Salaam, Chinese ships carrying arms have mysteriously appeared at little-used southern ports in Tanzania.

Peking sees Africa as a vital, strategic centre between East and West. In its own subtle way the Chinese Dragon is slithering across the continent, gaining political ground in many susceptible nations.

Idea Persistent

The Asian Highway Still a Patchwork

By JOHN STIRLING from Bangkok

TWO young Austrians arrived the other day in Bangkok on the motorcycle which they had ridden from Graz, some 15,000 kilometres away. With Southeast Asia as their goal, they felt that their odyssey really began, two months ago, at the border post of Bazargan, on the Turkish-Iranian frontier.

Bazargan marks the beginning of the Asian Highway. This United Nations project, launched in 1959, will eventually set up a road system stretching unbroken from Singapore and Saigon to the Middle East and Europe.

In Iran, as the Austrian travellers noted, the highway is already an artery for heavy truck traffic. Putting their trust in Allah, Iranian truckers drive as if they were on the Monte Carlo circuit.

From Teheran the highway (Route A-1) passes through the holy city of Meshed, and so to Herat in Afghanistan. When this was the Silk Road between China and Arabia, great fortified hostels, or caravanserai, were built at intervals of about 30 miles—the daily range of a camel caravan. Today the only shelter for travellers is in small chai khanas (tea houses) in the drab, mud-built villages. The road through Iranian Turkmenia is of baked earth or light gravel. Heavy traffic gives it a washboard surface, gruelling for motorists and even worse for cyclists.

* * *

In Afghanistan, the highway project is obviously surging ahead. From Herat to Kandahar, the Russians have built a broad concrete-surfaced road. From Kandahar, U.S. Army engineers have taken the road up to the capital, Kabul. The result of this international effort is one of the longest stretches of paved highway in the entire network.

Along their portion of the route, the Russians have built the first two modern motels on the Asian Highway, at Herat and Farah Rud. Both are one-storeyed buildings with 30 rooms and a swimming pool. Wisely, the Russians and Americans have left untouched avenues of pine trees which line the road for long stretches.

Through the formidable crags of the Khyber Pass the Aryans rode into West Pakistan. Now they followed a historic road familiar to travellers in the Indian sub-continent since the 17th century. Here the Asian Highway is in fact the refurbished Grand Trunk Road, built originally by the Mogul emperor to control India, then extended by their British successors.

Like a time-smoothed chain, it links the fabled cities of Peshawar, Amritsar, Delhi, Agra, Allahabad and Calcutta. The young Austrians were overwhelmed by the enormous distances, the vast population, the sheer weight of history. For them, the most vivid impression was not of the Old Fort in Delhi or the Golden Temple in Amritsar, but the brand new city rising at Islamabad, near Rawalpindi. Its elegant fusion of Islamic and Western architecture, and its futuristic street plan gave them a glimpse of an Asia breaking from the shackles of the past.

* * *

The Grand Trunk Road has been resurfaced for most of its length to meet the standards of the Asian Highway, and has been extended to the Burmese border. However, when the Austrians reached Calcutta, they decided to ship themselves and their cycle to Singapore.

The Asian Highway concept is still frustrated by Burma's refusal to permit surface traffic across her frontiers. This great gap in the network is an embarrassment to the planners and an annoyance to travellers. But there is no immediate prospect of a change of policy by Burma's "strong man," General Ne Win.

So travellers with the resolution and the time to follow the rest of the highway resume their eastward journey at Singapore. Up the spine of Malaysia, through rubber estates and flooded rice fields, a broad macadamized road flows through Kuala Lumpur, the Malaysian capital; Songkhla, the southern seaport and holiday resort of Thailand; Nakhon Pathom, with its golden-tiled Buddhist stupa, then into Bangkok, the shimmering "City of Angels." The Austrians described this stretch as the most relaxing of their journey. Good roads, cheap but comfortable hotels and amiable people made a welcome change from the rigors of the Middle East and South Asia.

* * *

After a few days' rest in Bangkok, they set out on the extension of the highway leading to the teak forests of northern Thailand. Here the highway, in theory, loops back into Burma, but in fact goes no further than the Thai city of Chiengrai, a few miles from the border.

The alternative was to travel from Bangkok through Cambodia to Saigon, the eastern terminus of the highway. But this route is bedevilled by a diplomatic squabble between Thailand and Cambodia and by the physical risks of travel across the war-ravaged Vietnamese-Cambodian frontier. The Austrians decided rather to retrace their route to Penang, there to embark again for India, and so back to Graz in time for Christmas.

They will have a more intimate acquaintance with the Asian Highway than most of the United Nations planners. Unlike them, the young Austrians know within a furlong where the potholes begin after Teheran, how many monsoon months there are between Delhi and Agra, and how frontier officials all along the road behave towards impecunious travellers. They know also that the highway is still a patchwork of ancient and modern roads, divided up by national frontiers, held together only by an idea. But the idea is a great and persistent one, which will survive the present obstacles in its path.

Washington Calling

Surprising Support for Wallace

By MARQUIS CHILDS from South Dearborn

THE shift is changing at the River Rouge plant, the industrial complex that makes raw materials from start to finish into Ford cars. The huge stacks belch out smoke and soot, and the workers coming off shift pour out of Gate 4 into the littered street.

They are members of Local 600 of the United Auto Workers. The UAW more than any other union has made a consistent effort to integrate Negroes and upgrade their role in the union — of the 35,000 in Local 600 an estimated 16,000 are Negroes. More than in any of the big unions the stress has been on education and political action.

Yet to the consternation of the UAW hierarchy a surprisingly high percentage of these Northern trade unionists are for George C. Wallace for president. In the South, yes, that is understandable. But here in this great industrial city where industrial unionism got its start, it is a phenomenon deeply disturbing to UAW leaders.

By secret ballot among delegates to 15 state and regional UAW conventions the Humphrey-Muskie ticket got 87.8 per cent, Wallace 10.2 per cent and Nixon-Agnew 1 per cent. While the vote as announced was not broken down by regions it was quite clear that the Wallace strength was not confined to the South. And it was clear, too, that the Wallace showing among the rank and file would be considerably higher than 10 per cent.

* * *

That was evident in interviews with white workers as they came out of the plant. Of 19 men chosen at random 10 were for Wallace, three for Nixon, three for Humphrey, two hadn't decided and one replied malignantly that they were all equally bad. Their response covered the whole range of the deep discontents that seem so pervasive.

"I don't dare take my wife and kids downtown to a movie any more," one man in his middle 40s said. "That's what we've come to. And it's almost as bad in the daytime as it is at night."

This was the most common response — crime in the streets, violence, the lack of any security. But in at least three replies frank resentment of the Negro was expressed — he's being given everything. He thinks he can do whatever he pleases.

Two men I talked with had come from Alabama to work in the Rouge plant 25 years ago. They both thought Wallace had done a good job down there. And while they were aware of the wage differential in favor of Detroit as against Birmingham, Alabama's biggest industrial city, they both said they would like to go back if the wage difference could be evened up.

Inflation was another source of discontent inducing a favorable view of Wallace. One man said that for the past year and a half he had been able to buy his eight children only the cheapest clothes and put the cheapest foods on the table. He is working a six-day and sometimes a seven-day week and often a 12-hour day, so that with all the overtime his take-home pay is $175 or even $200 a week. Yet it doesn't go far enough.

Only one man spoke of the Vietnam war. He was a hard-liner who had voted for Barry Goldwater and in his view Wallace would "get it over with" no matter what he had to do as president.

Underlying many of the responses was a resentment, a sense of helplessness, before forces that were uncontrollable. The whites out of the South the vast influx of the Negro in the past 25 or 30 years has completely altered the condition of life. Watching the shift come and go, it was striking to note how little exchange there was between Negroes and whites.

Three of the more thoughtful men said they might change their minds by election day. Since Wallace couldn't win, they would be throwing their votes away, and even if Wallace got in "they" would block anything he wanted to do. Abandoning Wallace two would vote for Nixon, one for Humphrey.

This is the hope the UAW nurses in launching a large-scale propaganda campaign to persuade wavering union members that Wallace is a menace. Local 600's newspaper, Ford Facts, has devoted much of the last three issues to showing what the Alabama wage differential means and to reprinting a vigorous attack on the third-party candidate. Along with this goes a favorable presentation of Humphrey material.

But it is very late. If the sample recorded here has any significance, attitudes are deeply entrenched. Wallace as a symbol of protest may have more influence in the North than even the polls now show.

Little More than a Dream

Awesome Barriers to Asian Railway

By KENNETH LANGBELL from Bangkok

NOTHING points out the futility of attempts at co-operation between Asian countries quite as clearly as the current dream of a Trans-Asian Railway linking Saigon with Europe.

A Japanese team of railway experts is presently scurrying about Southeast Asia conducting preliminary field surveys, while the UN Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East (ECAFE) issues glowing statements about its brainchild.

Indeed, it is estimated that for only $300 million (what the United States spends in five days on the Vietnam war) the Trans-Asian Railway's 1,000 missing miles could be completed.

Unfortunately, nothing in Asia is that simple. Geographically and politically, awesome barriers block the way of the envisioned 9,750-mile rail link across the Asian continent.

* * *

For example, laying a railroad through the jungles, across the rivers and over the mountains dividing Thailand and Burma is such a terrible job that Japanese occupation forces killed 9,000 British, U.S. and European prisoners trying during the Second World War and still didn't make it.

Two gigantic unbridged rivers, India's Brahmaputra and the Mekong separating Laos and Thailand, stand in the railway's path, as does Lake Van in Iran.

Nevertheless, rivers eventually can be crossed and lakes skirted. The thing that makes the ECAFE planners resemble a group of children standing in front of a store window admiring a new model train is the political jungles, rivers and mountains that loom in the way.

It is illegal and dangerous to enter or leave Burma overland by any means, while Cambodia has severed relations and closed its borders with its two important neighbors, Thailand and South Vietnam.

Nor are they likely to have anything more to do with a Trans-Asian Railway than they are with the ill-fated Asian Highway, which Peking has branded an imperialist scheme to surround it.

* * *

For if military equipment and manpower could be hauled economically for great distances along the Asian Highway, the same can be said for an Istanbul-Saigon railway, and nervous nations such as Burma and Cambodia are not about to incur the wrath of the Chinese dragon.

(The fact Peking has had little or nothing to say about the Trans-Asian Railway indicates that not even the Red Chinese leaders take it very seriously.)

The proposal for the railway network with the long-term objective of linking by rail Europe and Africa with South and Southeast Asia was put before the 15th session of ECAFE's Transport and Communications Committee in December, 1966.

The session accepted it, as did the commission itself at its 23rd session in April, 1967.

The railway subcommittee at its 9th session in October, 1967, listed the principal problems as diversity of gauges, engineering standards and the construction of missing links. (With Russia as a member, ECAFE cannot afford to discuss such subtleties as the Viet Cong's control of most of the area through which the railway would run in Vietnam.)

The subcommittee suggested certain remedial solutions on break of gauge, such as developing a special axle to run on the various gauges, and called for economic studies to support engineering surveys and planning.

* * *

A regional railway adviser was appointed in December, 1967, and the Japanese government — possibly stung by its conscience over such wartime activities as the "Death Railway" between Thailand and Burma — fielded a team of experts to survey the railways of Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand.

Last April ECAFE at its 24th session "expressed satisfaction" that the Trans-Asian Railway already had been initiated, and both France and West Germany indicated willingness to provide assistance on specific projects.

In fact, the only real thing that had been initiated had been initiated by the European empire builders during the late 19th Century, who had built railways within their respective colonies for strategic and commerical reasons.

The British had built 1,320 miles of railroad in Burma, 37,000 miles in India, 7,000 miles in Pakistan and 1,210 miles in Malaya; the French 780 miles in Vietnam and 240 miles in Cambodia; the Dutch 3,818 miles in Indonesia, and the United States 715 miles in the Philippines.

When placed on a map with the railways of the Middle East and never-colonialized Thailand, they all seemed to form a kind of pattern that in theory could be connected to form a Trans-Asian Railway.

* * *

The first 2,235 miles of the railway is standard gauge from Istanbul to the Iran-Pakistan border. All but about 350 miles are done, but those will take at least until 1971 to finish.

The second lap of the railway — 3,250 miles of broad gauge track from the Iran-Pakistan border across India and into East Pakistan — is complete.

It is the third lap — 3,265 miles of metre gauge track across Southeast Asia — that is virtually impossible, with missing links or closed borders dividing every single country with the exception of Thailand-Malaysia.

Until the developing countries of Southeast Asia learn to co-operate, the Japanese can dash about restoring their image and ECAFE can play with its model train, but any Trans-Asian Railway can be little more than a dream.

Wilson Holding Firm in Face of U.K. Labor Uproar

Another Year of Economic Restraint

By HAROLD MORRISON from London

Britain faces another year of economic restraint. That much is evident from the Labor party's annual conference where a roaring denunciation of the Labor government's stringent pay policies served more of a way of letting off steam than of forcing Prime Minister Wilson's hand.

* * *

The party's rank-and-file membership is well aware that in this mid-term, non-election year Wilson can safely ignore his furious critics. His elected supporters are the ones who count and they are unlikely to desert him when the alternative could be purge, chaos and a crushing defeat at the polls.

Thus one national newspaper suggests party conferences in this particular year are nothing more than political bings. They are supposed to be showcases of democracy at work, but while each delegate can make his play and thereby get a kick out of it, concerted party views may have little relationship to government policy which may be dictated by the dire circumstances in which Britain finds itself.

* * *

The government is still waiting for the day when the country can build up a surplus by selling more to the world than it buys. It had hoped the surplus would come this year but instead there will be another big deficit of about $1,300,000,000. Now the official prediction is that it will come next year.

But what if it doesn't?

Roy Jenkins, chancellor of the exchequer, has ruled out import controls, because, as he says, these would force other countries to retaliate against Britain's exports. Probably another reason which he didn't spell out is that many countries would be reluctant to continue providing long-credit for Britain if Britain threatened a direct freeze on their products.

Gaining a trade surplus is crucial and this great need likely will increase the country's worrisome preoccupation with the monthly trade figures in 1969.

But the year also is likely to see workers' preoccupation with their earnings if, as the government says, the restraints on increases must continue.

* * *

The current trend would therefore suggest that Wilson dare not call an early election. The blunt economic facts placed before the unhappy Socialists indicate Wilson will play for all the time he can get and that he won't seek renewal of his mandate until it trickles out in 1971.

Twilight War Goes On Between Two Koreas

By ROBERT S. ELEGANT from Munsan

All day long, heavy construction equipment and concrete-mixers pound through this reborn city where one of the bitterest battles of the Korean war was fought and where seemingly interminable negotiations later produced an armistice.

The allies are building a virtual Maginot Line of reinforced bunkers, tunnels and underground gun positions all along the 155-mile front that stretches west from Munsan to the Yellow Sea and east across jagged mountains to the Sea of Japan.

The defense in depth — four lines of varying strength — counters the burrow-like fortifications the North Koreans have erected two-and-a-half miles to the north across the demilitarized zone, now overgrown with trees and flush with wild animals.

* * *

But some observers fear the soldiers dug in on the southern edge of the DMZ may be prepared to fight the wrong enemy.

The 18 divisions of hardy soldiers of the Republic of Korea (ROK) Army, who man most of that line reinforced by two U.S. divisions, can almost certainly hold the North Korean forces that oppose them. Despite certain deficiences in technique and equipment, it is generally felt the ROKs might bend, but would not break under a conventional attack.

* * *

However, two quite different confrontations are met between the quasi-democratic Republic of (south) Korea and the communist Democratic Peoples' Republic of (north) Korea. The other underground war flared dramatically with the assassination attempt against President Chung Hee Park last January, just two days before the capture of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo.

In October, 1966, communist Premier Kim Il-Sung of the north jettisoned his previously reasonable approach to the "reunification" under his control of the 12,000,000 in the north with the 30,000,000 in the south. Abandoning his pleas to oust the "foreign-dominated" government of the south, he virtually declared war. Armed force, Kim proclaimed, applied internally and externally, was the only way to overthrow the enemy regime in the south.

* * *

Armed clashes with North Korean infiltrators followed. Most clashes were concentrated along the demilitarized zone, as agents tried to break through into the south. But others flared in the deep interior of South Korea.

An ominous concentration of hard-core pro-guerrilla forces appeared in the Taebaeksan-Chirisan mountain areas, one in the northeast, the other in the southwest.

The North Koreans appeared determined to kindle a guerrilla movement in a country they reckoned was ripe for revolt.

* * *

Since that time, the rate of incidents in the interior has declined radically. Firefights within the demilitarized zone are still numerous, though their number, too, has decreased.

Korean sources assert that 150 infiltrators were picked up in the interior last year, against only four so far this year. They claim, with much justification, that the South Korean people, having learned to know the communists at first hand during the war, simply don't like them. Encouraged by big rewards, the people turn the agents in to the authorities.

* * *

Other tactics also have reduced communist infiltrators' success.

South Korea's infinitely indented coastline measures 5,000 miles, with 1,500 of those miles critical. Coast-watchers now patrol the vital areas to catch infiltrators landed from swift communist vessels with fishing boat superstructures and PT-boat hulls. They supplement naval patrol forces which drove an infiltration boat ashore on remote Cheju Island several months ago.

Ashore, the national police have taken over the anti-guerrilla watch in the interior from the army, which was not well adapted to the task. A local civilian militia is on call to assist the police.

* * *

On the face of it, the South Korean government appears to have blocked the communists' attempt to raise new guerrilla bands among the disaffected. Neither U.S. nor Korean sources, however, have a good fix on the possible number of communist cells or individual agents operating in the cities.

With at least 20,000 North Koreans specially trained as communist-style Green Berets to penetrate the south, then organize and lead guerrilla bands, apprehension is quite understandable.

It appears, however, that Kim Il-Sung is recasting a strategy which has, so far, failed.

* * *

A large proportion of the infiltration attempts are directed at the sector above Munsan held by the U.S. 2nd Division, reinforced by elements of the reserve U.S. 7th Division.

"The Americans," explains a foreign officer, "simply aren't used to living the way ambush patrols must if they are to kill infiltrators. They go out all scented with hair oil and fancy soaps so you could almost swear the infiltrators can smell them out, they sometimes smoke on patrol — and sometimes get themselves ambushed."

* * *

The officer added: "Of course, I may be overstating it a little. But the ROKs are different. They have the patience to sit for days, eating cold food and living like animals. That's what you need in this kind of twilight war."

Reds Still Plotting To Take Over In Indonesia

By PHIL NEWSOM from Indonesia

In Jakarta, the Indonesian flag flies at half staff and then, 24 hours later, moves up dramatically and flutters from the top of the mast.

Into the jungled hills surrounding the dusty little town of Blitar in Eastern Java, birthplace of one-time president-for-life Sukarno, an army squad disappears only to reappear later as a communist querilla force.

From political exile in Bogor, 40 miles south of Jakarta, Sukarno is brought to be asked about crimes against the state "past and present."

* * *

And, as part of the ceremonies observing the third anniversary of an abortive communist attempt to take over Indonesia, strongman President Suharto leads a pilgrimage to Crocodile Hole, the abandoned well from which the bodies of six Indonesian generals, mutilated by the communists, were recovered on that morning of Oct. 1, three years ago.

These are the symbols of near-defeat and despair to a victory still not consolidated and of a continuing struggle in which neither Sukarno nor the communists have yet given up.

And they lead to the question, is a communist take-over still possible in Indonesia?

Suharto and his generals say no. A better answer probably is: Not in the foreseeable future. But it is a question that merits examination.

* * *

When the communists made their move three years ago, theirs was the biggest party outside the Soviet Union and Red China. Membership was listed at 3,000,000, plus countless sympathizers.

In the weeks which followed failure of the communist coup, hundreds of thousands of Reds died in a blood bath whose full extent is now known. There were demands that Sukarno himself be made to face the death penalty for compliance, if not complicity, with the coup.

But other problems persist and in the jungled hills around Blitar the hard core of an estimated 300,000 card-carrying communists of east and central Java is plotting again.

In Italy, everyone thinks he's a racing car driver. That's why we've had to build a lot of things into this Fiat you wouldn't expect in a family car.

In the early 1900's, the victories of drivers like Felice Nazzaro, Pietro Bordino and Carlo Salamano made Italians the most racing-minded people in the world. Result: Italy has virtually become one big racetrack.

So isn't it natural that a family car designed in Italy should have racing spirit — something you wouldn't normally find in an imported sedan?

That's what racing-minded Italians have discovered in this new Fiat 124. A lively 1197 cc engine that'll exceed 87 mph; an all-synchromesh 4-on-the-floor; sure-footed disc brakes all around; and exceptional road-holding suspension that includes a transverse Panhard rod, hydraulic shock absorbers and a stabilizer bar.

But because the Fiat 124 is a family car, it has family features galore: wider-opening doors for easier entry; a comfortable, unusually roomy interior; extra-large windows so everyone can enjoy Italy's great scenery; a huge luggage compartment that holds everything a family needs on a long trip; safety padded dash and sun visors for added protection; padded arm rests for comfort and convenience; plus a powerful heater and defroster (for those Canadian-like winters in northern Italy).

Now find out why The Family Car was voted "Car of the Year" by all European automotive editors. See your Fiat dealer. 124 Sedan.

What's Good for Party's Good for Canada

Liberals' Recurring Theme

By DENNIS BRAITHWAITE from Ottawa

What's good for the Liberal Party's good for Canada is a recurring theme of Liberalism that was manifest during the powerful King and St. Laurent generalities, latent in the minority Pearson years, and now coming to the fore again in the Trudeau era.

The Prime Minister's wish to have the party act as 'ombudsman for the whole country, expressed at a recent meeting of the Liberal national executive, is a more attractive philosophy than the late C. D. Howe's trenchant, "who's to stop us?" which is now inscribed among the great set pieces of our folk-history. Yet it springs from the same source, a conviction that Liberal objectives and the common good are synonymous.

* * *

Earlier, we heard how the Action Trudeau youth groups of the election campaign are being pyramiding into cadres called Action Canada, combining, presumably, the functions of the Company of Young Canadians, the Boy Scouts, the Sea Cadets, the Young Socialist League and Moral Re-Armament. Their mission: To help everybody be better Canadians and partake of the just society.

If somehow, their work also serves the purpose of keeping the Trudeau Thing alive in the minds and hearts of the electorate, why so much the better. And if it jogs the Liberal machine into an unaccustomed between-election show of activity that will be shiny, too.

* * *

This concern for the party's role was expressed in somewhat loftier terms by Liberal Senator Richard Stanbury in his press briefing on the ombudsman proposal.

"Our whole approach is that we have got to turn the political party into a vehicle of democracy," he said. "If we don't succeed in doing that, people will have no recourse but demonstrations and violence to get their point across to the Government."

People are frustrated by a pervasive government they cannot understand, he went on. "Our job is to find some way of breaking down these barriers of frustration between the people and the Government. There is no other body or organization or institution to do it except the political party."

* * *

Contradition, please. There are tons of organizations and intitutions whose whole purpose is to break down these barriers—the Canadian Labor Congress, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the Farmers' Union, the Wheat Pool, the Consumres' Association, the fisherman's lobby, the apple growers, the bee-keepers, all the real estate boards, and ratepayers associations, the provinces, the municipal governments and, right now, those dozens of students organizations across the country.

This is how our system works. The political party exists for the narrow purpose of electing a government. We don't need or want it to take on the job of providing a 'democraite' outlet for our frustrations or a vehicle for our protest, thanks all the same.

* * *

It is in totalitarian lands that the government party—Communists, the Falange, the National Socialists—undertake to intervene in the whole life of the people, stimulating "socialist competition," "dialogue with writers and intellectuals," "factory hunsonols," "work norms," "winter relief," "wall newspapers" and the like. We have our own institutions of dissent and they're the real McCoy.

If they sometimes hold demonstrations and even resort to violence, it is because the party in power has forgotten the source of its power and has begun to think like C. D. Howe

Equity Shortage Growing For Investment-Minded

TORONTO (CP) — Because Canadian companies prefer to raise extra cash at the bank rather than by selling common stock to the public, there will soon be a chronic shortage of equities on Canada's stock markets.

This is the conclusion of a study of supply and demand in the equity market compiled by Prof. G. R. Conway of York University of the Toronto Stock Exchange.

The study says the shortage of equities is made worse by the fact that about half the largest Canadian corporations are not listed on stock exchange because they are foreign-controlled or under private or government ownership.

DIRECT INVESTMENTS

On top of this, about 30 per cent of shares on the market are tied up in the form of "direct" or permanent investments. Holdings of this type often represent control of a company and usually amount to 10 per cent or more of its issued stock.

The study estimates that new issues in Canada will average only $700,000,000 a year, while demand may soon be running at $1,300,000,000 annually.

It found that in the nine years between 1955 and 1964, bank loans and similar short-term debts were the major external source of company funds. Retained earnings and internal sources provided just over 40 per cent of the cash needed for expansion and renewal.

SIX COMPANIES

Although no comparable figures for new equity issues in the same period were provided, new issues between 1962 and 1966 amounted to only $1,900,000,000, and about half this money was raised by only six companies.

Looking at the spread of ownership in the market, the study found about 40 per cent of the market value of all listed Canadian equities is held by non-residents.

However, it says that this foreign-owned slice of the market is concentrated in relatively few companies.

More than half the foreign portfolio investments at the end of 1965 were confined to three stocks: Inco with 72 per cent of its common shares held abroad, Alcan with 68 per cent and Canadian Pacific Railway, 48 per cent.

HOLDINGS SHIFT

There have been shifts in these holdings since then. And the other type of foreign control, direct investment, was heavily weighted by three oil companies—Imperial Oil, British American Oil and Shell Canada.

Canadian ownership of listed stocks is estimated at around 60 per cent. At the end of 1966, Canadian individuals held 40 per cent and the balance was fairly equally divided between resident financial institutions and resident listed holding companies.

The study says that equity holdings are more evenly distributed among different income groups in Canada than in the United States.

Canadian ownership is almost equally divided between individuals in three broad income categories—under $10,000 a year, between $10,000 and $25,000 and over $25,000.

In the United States, however, the under $10,000 group owns only 26 per cent of all individual holdings compared with 35 per cent in Canada. Americans earning over $25,000 a year hold about half the individual market compared with 34 per cent in Canada.

Chrysler Joins Price Boost

WINDSOR, Ont. (UPI) — Chrysler of Canada joined three other major auto makers Tuesday in announcing price increases for its 1969 model cars.

Ron Todgham, president of Chrysler, said the average increase amounted to $43, or 1.3 per cent over 1968 prices.

Only a few hours before the Chrysler announcement, American Motors of Canada announced a 1 per cent, or $39 average hike for its 1969 models. Lawrence Rice, American Motors president, said the increase was due to "additional product features (and) higher labor and material costs."

Chrysler did not give a specific reason for its increase, but said the "revised prices, together with the company's product improvements and design changes establish Chrysler . . . cars as the best competitive value ever offered to a Canadian consumer . . ."

The Chrysler and American Motors announcements follow similar ones last week by General Motors of Canada and Ford of Canada. Both companies announced 1 per cent average increases, with Ford's amounting to $32 per car and GM's $33.

COMINCO APPOINTMENTS

F. E. BURNET — G. H. D. HOBBS — J. F. M. DOUGLAS

Cominco Ltd. announces the appointment of F. E. Burnet as vice-president at Montreal and G. H. D. Hobbs as vice-president at Vancouver, and J. F. M. Douglas as vice-president, corporate services.

Mr Burnet, in addition to assuming general administrative duties at Cominco's head office, will be responsible for the company's corporate development in all areas except the Pacific Region. He will retain his position as chairman of Cominco's wholly-owned United States subsidiary Cominco American Incorporated.

Mr. Hobbs, in addition to assuming administration of Cominco's activities in the Vancouver area, will be responsible for the company's corporate development in the Pacific Region. Mr. Hobbs retains his position of chairman and chief executive officer of Western Canada Steel Limited and chairman of the board of Pacific Coast Terminals Co. Ltd. Both companies are Cominco subsidiaries.

In his new position, Mr. Douglas takes personnel, data processing, public relations and advertising, over administrative responsibility for research.

World Monetary Questions

U.S. View Like Canada's

WASHINGTON (CP) —Canada and five other industrial nations stated their views Tuesday on the future of the world's monetary system and economic aid, and began a patient assessment of prospects for compromise.

In most instances, Canada's Finance Minister Edgar Benson stood four-square with U.S. Treasury Secretary Henry Fowler.

Fowler, in his last address to an annual meeting of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund before retirement from the U.S. cabinet, voiced special urgency about the central issue of creating a new world reserve asset.

He said the plan for so-called "special drawing rights" should be ratified by members before the end of 1968. And he appeared to suggest that the first rights should be brought into use some time in 1969.

On this point, Benson was not specific in his speech. But at a news conference later he said the new reserve units should be created as fast as possible.

The rights would supplement the increasingly-scarce reserves of gold and convertible currencies that the fund and its 107 members employ to correct payments imbalances and to promote an increasing flow of world trade.

'PAPER GOLD'

France, and to a lesser extent Germany and Italy, took a characteristically cautious approach to early use of the rights, sometimes referred to as "paper gold."

They are concerned that this kind of instant bank account would be employed by the United States as an easy substitute for the fundamental corrections they say the U.S. must make in its balance-of-payments deficit.

Makoto Usami, governor of the Bank of Japan, said the system should be introduced as quickly as possible.

COUNTRY AID

Differences were also indicated on the current questions about aid to developing nations.

India expressed the concern of the poorer nations dependent on development assistance, saying that donor nations in a variety of ways continue to make the terms of their help too difficult.

India's Finance Minister Morarji Desai asked for a faster decision by the IMF and World Bank on measures to stablize the prices of primary products that make up a high proportion of the exports of underdeveloped countries.

NO EXCUSE

He was supported by French Finance Minister François-Xavier Ortoli, who said there is no excuse for delaying another year a report on the problem. He called for concrete solutions to be submitted by Dec. 31, 1968.

Several speakers touched on the subject of gold sales under the new two-tier gold system, although Fowler surprisingly ignored it.

South Africa, a big producer, contends that it retains a right in the new system to sell gold at $35 an ounce to the IMF.

Karl Schiller, West Germany's economic affairs minister, said Tuesday his compromise plan would permit fund purchases under certain safeguards if the price of gold on the private market falls to or below $35. Since the two-price system was established in March, monetary stocks of gold have been virtually frozen in volume and insulated from the private market.

ACADEMIC QUESTION

Benson told the news conference Canada sides with the U.S., and in any case he considers the question academic because the free price of gold is unlikely to fluctuate much.

Benson was the first minister of an industrialized nation to speak at the meeting, a position he used to support strongly World Bank plans outlined Monday by the bank's new President Robert S. McNamara.

He specifically endorsed McNamara's proposals to help launch family-planning programs in countries receiving aid from the multilateral group of development agencies.

Merger of Jewellers Absorbs City Store

Two old established B.C. jewellry firms, one in Victoria and the other in Vancouver, have been merged.

Little and Taylor of Douglas Street, has been sold to W. H. Grassie Jewellers of Vancouver.

A new company, W. H. Grassie, Victoria, has been formed to take over the Victoria operation.

WORLD AMATEUR

Its president, Walt McElroy, is a grandson of the founder and is a well-know figure in the sporting world, having some years ago been one of Canada's international amateur golfers.

The Grassie firm was started in 1886, and Little and Taylor has been in business in Victoria since 1890. Owner of the firm, Tom Little, is the son of one of the founders.

McElroy says that the Victoria staff will be retained under the new management.

ISLAND BOARD MEETS

Seaboard Life Insurance held the first quarterly meeting of its Vancouver Island Associate Board of Advisors at Qualicum last weekend.

Attending along with company president Harry Seed were Jack Baikie of Campbell River, Hector Stone of Duncan and John Copp and John Reed of Victoria. The two other Island members of the board who could not attend are Bob Gibson of Victoria and Gerry Furney of Port McNeill.

Seed said that early next year Seaboard would have more than $200,000,000 of life insurance in force and premium income would exceed $3,000,000.

The company's new Equivest fund which provdes equity investment for holders of life policies had enjoyed an appreciation of 21 per cent in the first eight months of 1968, he said.

Three Victoria Players Complete Cougar Roster

Victoria Cougars, who have reason to believe that their second season in the B.C. Junior Hockey League will be considerably more successful than their first, yesterday completed selection of their playing roster with the signing of three Victoria-area players.

Coach Doug Anderson, thinking of future seasons as well as the one which starts on Friday, announced yesterday that he had signed leftwinger Bruce Cowick, rightwinger Scott Munro and defenceman Murray Kennett.

All played in midget ranks last season, Cowick in the Esquimalt Minor Hockey Association program and Munro and Kennett in the Victoria Minor Hockey Association.

Kennett is 16, which leaves him with a possible four seasons of junior hockey. Cowick and Munro are both 17 and Anderson believes the Cougars of the next two or three seasons will be built around the trio, two other 17-year-olds on the roster — goalkeeper Ed Forslund and centre Doug Gibson and 16-year-old centre Len Mills.

He also believes that the five 'youngsters' can make a significant contribution this season while gaining the experience to become the club nucleus for other seasons.

Gibson, a graduate of the Portland minor hockey program, has been a pleasant surprise and appears to have won a job as a starting centre. Cowick, one of the bigger players on the club at 178, and Munro, who moved here from Calgary two years ago, and Kennett have impressed with their desire.

BEHIND GRAHAME

Forslund, from last season's junior "B" team in Vernon, will back up Ron Grahame, who was back-up goalkeeper for the starry Murray Finlay last season. Miles, from Port Alberni, played in midget ranks last season.

Grahame is one of the eight 18-year-olds on the 20-player roster, giving the Cougars a minimum of 14 players who will be eligible for next season.

That may seem to add up to a lot of inexperience but Anderson has a solid core of experience on a club which includes only three holdovers—Grahame, leftwinger Dave Williams and John Van Horlick, who has been moved back to defence this season.

EXPERIENCED NEWCOMERS

Four forwards who starred for other clubs in the BCJHL last season are four big reasons why the Cougars rate at least as a playoff club this season.

They are centres Dave Cousins, who scored 30 goals and had 30 assists for Kelowna Buckaroos, and Grant Evans, who set a league record by scoring seven goals in one game for Kamloops Rockets, and leftwinger Adrian Blais and rightwinger Len Barrie from Penticton Broncos.

Other newcomers are defenceman Gerry Bond from the Kamloops junior "B" team, defenceman Laurie Moore from Kimberley, defenceman Shayne Webster from Fernie, rightwinger Graham Brown and defenceman Alex Stocks from Esquimalt juveniles, centre Bob Merluk from Victoria juveniles and defenceman Skip Casler, who played with the provincial juvenile champions from Trail last season.

WILL CARRY 20

Anderson plans to keep 20 players until Dec. 31, the deadline for cutting rosters to the league maximum of 19.

Hoping for more but having set a playoff spot as his goal, Anderson has been extremely pleased with his club in practice sessions and pre-season games.

"We are much faster and bigger than we were last season and we have more experience although we have a lot of rookies," he says.

SHOULD CLIMB

He doesn't feel that the loss of Finlay, the club's outstanding player last season, will prevent a climb in the standings.

"I think we'll be all right in goal," Anderson says. "Ron (Graham) is coming along just fine and I believe that he will become as good as Murray (Finlay) was for us last season."

Another reason for Anderson's optimism about puck-blocking is what he is certain will be an improved defence.

"They," he said of his defencemen, "won't make as many mistakes as our defence did last season. They'll get the puck out of our zone better and this will take a lot of pressure off the goalkeeper."

OPEN ON FRIDAY

Cougars open the season Friday night in Vancouver Forum against New Westminster Royals, then appear in their home opener at Memorial Arena against the Royals the next night.

Tickets are on sale at Memorial Arena. Judging from the pre-season sale, up over a financially successful first season, the Cougars are establishing junior hockey in Victoria despite their mediocre first-season performance.

San Diego Earns Tie As Camp Ends Here

San Diego Gulls completed their stay in Victoria last night by playing to a 4-4 tie with Phoenix Roadrunners in a pre-season Western Hockey League game played at Memorial Arena before 788 fans.

Gulls end their training-camp stay today to leave for their home base, stopping off en route for a return game against the Buckaroos in Portland tonight. They leave with an unbeaten pre-season record, having tied the Buckaroos, 2-2, here Saturday night and beaten Vancouver Canucks, 7-2, in Vancouver on Sunday.

WEAK-LOOKING SHOT

Ed Ehrenworth, former Victoria Maple Leaf, brought Gulls their tie last night, his weak-looking shot eluding goalkeeper Rick Charron at 7:17 of the third period in a game which was tied four times.

Phoenix Roadrunners, who will stay in Victoria to complete their training until Saturday morning, spotted the Gulls the first goal before scoring twice to take a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period.

Willie O'Ree opened the scoring in the game, skating around defenceman Ray Dupont before beating Charron.

TIPPED IN SHOT

Ted Snell, who played a strong game for the Roadrunners, tied it up when he tipped Tom Polanic's point shot past a startled Gary Simmons and Andre Pronovost, former National Hockey League regular, gave Phoenix the lead, converting a perfect pass from Rollie Wilcox on a two-on-one break.

Gordon Sinclair scored the only goal of the second period at 1:35 on a scrambling play in which the Phoenix defence looked poor to give San Diego a 2-2 tie.

IN OWN NET

Al Nicholson, after 25 seconds of the last period, received credit for San Diego's third goal when defenceman Roger Cote put the puck into his own goal trying to clear from in front of the net.

Jack Matheson then tied it at 3-3 for Phoenix at 4:59, scoring on Bob Champoux, who played the last 30 minutes in goal for the Gulls.

One of the two players from the Swedish national team trying out with the Roadrunners, Gunner Lindquist, put Phoenix ahead, 4-3, at 6:08, deflecting Ray Dupont's blazing blue line drive past Champoux, setting the stage for Ehrenworth's goal.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers have named their second new coach for the 1969 season with the hiring of Roy Hartsfield, manager of the Pacific Coast League Spokane Indians.

Ultimatum Scorned By Rebel

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — A spokesman for the maverick Canadian Hockey Association said Tuesday ultimatums from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association would not succeed.

Frank Basso of Guelph, CHA vice-president and president of the Western Ontario Junior Hockey League, a CHA affiliate, was replying to a statement by Gordon Juckes, CAHA executive director.

Juckes said Monday that any CHA player would be given until Nov. 30 to return to the CAHA. But players who have signed a CAHA card and then defected to the maverick league would have to obtain special approval for reinstatement.

Cardinals Favored in Series Despite Tiger Power Edge

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A classic pitching showdown between Detroit's Denny McLain, the first 31-game winner in 37 years, and St. Louis' Bob Gibson, the 1967 hero, opens the world series today at Busch Stadium with the home-town Cardinals favored.

Gibson, shooting for a record-tying sixth straight series victory, comes into the big confrontation with a dazzling 1.1 earned run average and 13 shutouts. McLain, baseball's story of the year, is the first to win 31 since Lefty Grove in 1931.

COULD SET PATTERN

Most observers expect the first game to set the pattern for the series in which the Cardinals are listed as 8-5 favorite. It is probable that the two pitching aces will meet three times if the series goes the seven-game route.

Telecast coverage of today's opening game of the world series can be seen on channels 2, 5 and 6 starting at 10:45 a.m. Radio coverage can be heard on CJVI (900), CBU (690) and KING (1090).

The bare statistics give the Tigers the edge in power with 185 homers to 73, but the speedy Cards have outhit the American League champs in average .249 to .235 and have stolen 110 bases to 26 by Detroit.

NO HYSTERIA

As both clubs clinched the pennants with room to spare, most of the usual pre-opening hysteria seems to be absent. It undoubtedly will heat up when they get down to work. A sellout crowd of 54,575 will be on hand.

Because Lou Brock's speed and base stealing ability ran Boston into the ground last year, McLain was asked Tuesday how he planned to handle the Cards' left-fielder.

JUST TWO WAYS

"We'll have to get him out or let him hit a home run," quipped the glib McLain, who has new answers for all situations. "That will keep him off the bases."

McLain spoke with awe of Gibson's record-breaking earned run average. "I was reading on the plane he allowed only 36 or 37 earned runs all year (actually 38)," said Denny. "That is unbelievable. I can't visualize it. But I like to be the underdog."

"I hear people talking about McLain being lucky because they get a lot of runs for him," said Gibson. "You don't win 30 games being lucky. You've got to have talent."

McLain's season statistics truly are amazing. His won-lost mark of 31-6 made him the first to win 30 since Dizzy Dean of the Cardinal Gas House Gang in 1934. Diz won two games and his brother Paul won the other two in that year's series, also against Detroit.

McLain started 41 games and completed 28, pitched 336 innings and struck out 280 batters.

Gibson, 32, had a 22-9 season that included 13 shutouts, a streak of 15 straight victories and 58 2-3 consecutive scoreless innings.

Winningest Starters Since 1905 Series

Not since the first two world series in 1903 and 1905 has there been a clash of pitchers like the one that opens the 1968 Series in St. Louis today.

And there never has been anything like it in the modern baseball era launched by Babe Ruth in the 1920s.

Denny McLain for Detroit has a 31-6 record and Bob Gibson for St. Louis goes in at 22-9, for a total of 53-15.

That total of 53 ties the figure for Deacon Phillippe (25-9) of Pittsburgh and Cy Young (28-10) of Boston in the very first series opener at Boston 65 years ago yesterday.

It's second only in a series opener to the 56-win total of New York's Christy Mathewson (31-9) and Philadelphia's Ed Plank (25-12) Oct. 9, 1905.

And it's the highest figure in any series since the second game, Oct. 6, and the fifth game, Oct. 10, in 1920, when the opposing starters were Cleveland's Jim Bagby (31-12) and Brooklyn's Burleigh Grimes (23-11) for a total of 54 victories.

For the record, the pitcher with the highest number of wins won only twice in those four games—Mathewson in 1905 and Bagby in the fifth 1920 game. And only two of the games were shutouts—again Mathewson, plus Grimes in 1920—and both scores were 3-0.

Unitas Confident Of Return

BALTIMORE (AP) — Johnny Unitas doesn't know when he might be playing quarterback again for Baltimore Colts, but he maintains he will and that his National Football League career is not finished.

"That is one thing I haven't even thought of," he replied when asked whether the injury to his right elbow might signal the end.

"The doctors tell me it is merely a torn muscle. They tell me it should heal with the proper rest, and I have no reason not to believe them."

MATTER OF TIME

The 35-year-old veteran of 12 seasons has missed the first three games of the season, and probably will not appear Sunday against Chicago Bears and even he did not sound optimistic about when he would play.

"I feel everything will come back," he said. "But it is a matter of time."

Earl Morrall, Unitas' understudy, has been running the Colts, who have won their first three games behind him.

Ditchburn Fires Ace

Ray Ditchburn shot his first hole-in-one recently at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

Ditchburn, who is a 24-year member of the club, used a two-wood to sink his tee-shot on the 223-yard, par three 11th hole.

Playing with Ditchburn at the time were Sam Krugar, Cy Price and Mike Barthow. Ditchburn shot an 86 for the round.

Van Brocklin Takes Over As Coach of NFL Falcons

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Norm Van Brocklin, one of pro football's most colorful characters, Tuesday was given the job of building the hapless Atlanta Falcons into a National Football League contender.

"Van Brocklin has been controversial" Atlanta owner Rankin Smith said in announcing the firing of Norb Hecker as coach and the hiring of Van Brocklin. "But he has one of the finest minds in pro football."

LONG-TERM CONTRACT

Van Brocklin, 42, has been given a long-term contract and promised a free hand in trading and drafting players, Smith said. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

The former NFL quarterback and coach of the Minnesota Vikings for six years was still at his home in Medicine Lake, Minn., when the Falcons announced the coaching change.

MEETS COACHES

Van Brocklin arrived in Atlanta at dusk, met with assistant coaches and then held a news conference, where he announced all the assistant coaches had agreed to stay with the Falcons for the rest of the season.

Van Brocklin said he realizes that he faces a challenge with the Falcons, but he added, "We're going to try to win every football game we're in."

He said he probably would stick with the current system followed by the Falcons "because it's much easier for me to change than for 40 players and the coaches to change at this time of the season."

Van Brocklin was beaming at the news conference, where he said, "I am glad to be back in football. I love football."

Smith said he fired Hecker after "an agonizing night" because "the club was not making the kind of progress I had anticipated."

"I was concerned with whether I had given Norb enough opportunity to develop a team," Smith said. "I decided he had enough of an opportunity."

WILL DRAW PAY

Hecker said he did not plan to stay with the team, although he will continue to draw his salary of an estimated $40,000 a year for the remainder of his contract which runs through 1970.

He is a former end with Canadian playing experience with the 1954 Toronto Argonauts.

Van Brocklin, who has been out of coaching since he left the Vikings after the 1966 season, will make his debut for the Falcons against Green Bay in Atlanta Sunday.

Oakland Trims Seven . . . . . Green May Retire

Barlow's Goal Ties Leafs

A goal midway through the third period by former Victoria Maple Leaf, Bob Barlow, gave Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League a 3-3 tie with the NHL Toronto Maple Leafs Tuesday before 12,779 Vancouver fans.

Mike Byers, Rich Ley and Bob Pulford scored for Toronto while Gerry Sillers and John Gofton fired the other Vancouver goals.

The clubs took it easy in the first two periods but tempers flared in the third period.

Mike Walton, fiery Toronto centre, and Vancouver's Brian Hextall squared off late in the period and both were ejected from the game after continuing the fight after a lineman's efforts to break it up.

George Gardner was brilliant in goal for Vancouver, kicking aside 43 shots. Toronto's Al Smith handled 29.

★ ★ ★

A goal by Claude Laforge at 2:10 of the third period gave Philadelphia Flyers of the NFL a 4-3 victory over Quebec Aces of the AHL at Moncton. Pat Hannigan, Gary Peters and Don Blackburn were the other Philadelphia scorers while Dick Sarrazin, Jim Johnson and Reg Meserve scored for Quebec.

★ ★ ★

Oakland Seals of the NFL assigned Aut Erickson and Stan Fuller to Cleveland Barons of the AHL and Mike Laughton to Vancouver Canucks. They gave outright releases to John Gravel, Bob Lemieux, Jean-Guy Morrissette and Murray Owen.

★ ★ ★

Ted Green said Tuesday in Winnipeg, he is prepared to retire from hockey rather than return to Boston Bruins at the same salary he received last season. Last week Allan Eagleson, NHL players' association president, was quoted in Toronto as suggesting Green abide by his contract, which has a year to run, or retire.

VIEWS of SPORT

By Red Smith

Among the major issues that have shaken the world, divided families, and emptied saloons lately is the clamorous question about Mickey Mantle's groovy home run off Dennis McLain. Did or did not Detroit's most celebrated organist deliberately slide a pitch down the pipe so Mantle could hit No. 535 and move past Jimmy Foxx into third place in all-time home run production?

After the game Mantle said he had got an impression that Denny wanted him to give the pitch a ride.

If so, was it the sportsmanlike generosity of a gentleman and musician or a dastardly betrayal of all the principles which we hold dear?

The issue may never be settled. In any case, it will not be disposed of more neatly than it was by Harry Markson at the height of the debate. Mr. Markson is known to the world as director of boxing for Madison Square Garden, but he was a baseball fan before he knew a hook from a handsaw.

"When a guy has bought 534 drinks in the same saloon," Mr. Markson observed, "he's entitled to one on the house."

★ ★ ★

The view here coincides with Mr. Markson's. With the pennant tucked away, it would have been no great catastrophe if Mantle's hit had beaten McLain, and that risk was pretty small. After Mickey took his poke, Denny went on to wrap up his 31st victory, thereby setting up a smoker for barroom quizmasters.

Everybody knows, they are saying in the watering holes, that McLain is the first pitcher to win 30 games in a season since Dizzy Dean did it 34 years ago, and the first to make it 31 since Bob Grove hit that mark in 1931. So who was the last to win 31?

For the benefit of readers who prefer to drink in peace, the answer is Grover Cleveland Alexander, who won 33 in 1916. The last before him was Walter Johnson, with 36 in 1913.

Getting back to McLain's generosity, he must have known even as he turned the ball loose that there was no assurance Mickey would hit it. It simply is not possible to pitch a home run on purpose. Lob up a cantaloupe and tell the batter it's coming. It is still a playable 5 to 1 that he'll pop it up, beat it into the dirt, or miss it altogether.

★ ★ ★

That doesn't mean that the hitter's chances aren't improved if the pitch comes "through his strength," as the saying goes. As a rule, there's about the same camaraderie between pitcher and batter as between cobra and mongoose, but there have been occasions, when, for one reason or another, a batter was purposely fed the sort of pitch he relished most.

One such case involved Dick Wakefield and Birdie Tebbetts, who probably was the first friend Wakefield made in baseball after the Tigers lured him out of the sophomore class at Michigan with some colored beads, a new car, and $52,000.

Wakefield was an enormously likeable kid and Tebbetts had been warned by a letter from Dick's mother asking the veteran catcher to keep an eye on her boy. They remained close even after Birdie was traded away.

In 1952, Tebbetts was with the Indians and Wakefield, out of a job, tried out with Cleveland in spring training. Failing to make it, he was taken on for a trial by the New York Giants when that club and the Indians hooked up for their annual barnstorming tour home from camp.

Tebbetts was catching when, with Cleveland leading by a run or two, Wakefield was sent in as a pinch-batter with two out in the ninth. There was a kid pitcher working, and Birdie happened to know the Indians had already decided to farm him out for additional experience, so one pitch more or less wasn't going to affect the boy's future.

Tebbetts called for the pitch he thought Wakefield was most likely to hit well, a fast ball across the letters. Dick hung it high on the centre field wall for a triple. The next batter popped up and it was Cleveland's ball game.

"You took pretty good care of your boy," sneered Herman Franks, the Giants' coach on third base.

"Was it a good pitch?" Birdie demanded.

"It had something on it."

"And the next pitch," Birdie said, "when the guy popped up. It was the same pitch, wasn't it? Yes. Well, let me tell you, when I'm catching a ball game, I don't take care of my mother!"

"And that," Birdie said afterwards, "was the truth. I didn't say anything about Wakefield's mother."

Club Championship Finals At Two Clubs on Weekend

Club championship battles are drawing to their closing stages in the Victoria area.

Finals will be played this weekend at Victoria and Gorge Vale clubs, and at Uplands on Oct. 12. The Royal Colwood club plays its semi-finals this week and the final on Oct. 13.

Doug Munro, who led the qualifiers, and was the pre-championship favorite took himself into the final at Oak Bay by beating Bruce McFarlane, and his opponent over the 36-hole test Saturday will be the youthful Brian Carbery. Carbery beat Bill Thompson to gain the final.

The "B" championship final will be contested by Dudley Carter and Charles Keenan.

City amateur champion Al MacLeod played crushing golf in the semi-final of the Gorge Vale championship Sunday when he was five under par in beating Gordon Jones, 6 and 5. MacLeod shot seven birdies against his hapless rival.

AT THE 19th

With Harry Young

In the other semi-final, Jim McColl took advantage of an off-form Cec Ferguson to score a 4-3 victory.

The pair meet in the final over 36 holes Sunday.

In the "B" championship, last year's winner Andy Giraldeau is again making a strong bid. He meets Robert Copeland in the final.

Youth petered out in its battle to take over the Uplands championship when Roger Bishop and David McColl both lost semi-final squeakers to Chad Heggie and Gordon Pellow, respectively.

Pellow beat Bishop at the 19th hole while Heggie finished it off one up at the 18th. Both Pellow and Heggie are past holders of the club championship.

In addition to playing the club championship finals on Oct. 12, Uplands is introducing a novelty — a windup medal round for all those players who took part in the championship.

Semi-finalists at Royal Colwood are Laurie Kerr, Ron Howard Sr., Vic Painter and Joe Evans.

This weekend Kerr meets Howard and Painter goes against Evans. Painter and Kerr are both past champions.

Thanksgiving weekend is going to be a busy one at the Victoria Golf Club. In addition to the usual events on Thanksgiving Monday, the club is staging a series of competitions on Saturday to celebrate the forthcoming 75th birthday of the club.

A medal round open to all members will be played with special events for the over 65 years group, long-driving, putting and hidden-hole competitions.

★ ★ ★

The first of the season's button matches which was to have been played this weekend at Victoria Golf Club has been postponed for one week.

Al MacLeod, one of the Gorge Vale challenging team, will be involved that day in the final of his club championship, and his partner Bill Wakeham will be in the U.S. on gold trail qualifying business.

Holders Gordon Wass and Norm Boden are the Cowichan pair who lost winter hold on to the buttons through six challenges, and in the last game finished all square with MacLeod and Wakeham.

Some Room for Fans On O'Keefe's Bus

Victoria O'Keefes travel to Callister Park in Vancouver Saturday to meet Eintracht, one of the two new entries in the Pacific Coast Soccer League this season. There are still some seats available on the bus which will take the team to the mainland and those interested in taking the trip to the game should contact Jack Evans at 386-7721 or Jack Metcalfe at 384-9854.

Coach Bill Abbott of the O'Keefes is looking over a new arrival in Victoria, left winger Peter Stuber. Dutch-born Stuber is not playing for any team at the present moment.

Three Ontario Curlers Lose Suspension Appeal

TORONTO (CP) — Three members of Alfie Phillips's 1967 Canadian championship rink from Toronto will not be eligible for Ontario Curling Association competitions during 1968-69.

Third John Ross, second Ron Manning and lead Keith Reilly were suspended by the association last April for accepting prizes worth more than $150 a man.

Phillips gave his prize to a service club and was not suspended from competition.

The prizes were motorized snow toboggans, which the Phillips rink received for finishing second in an international competition last December.

The three players under suspension applied for reinstatement and were turned down by an executive meeting of the OCA.

ONE YEAR ANYWAY

"The OCA will consider their application for reinstatement a year from April 30, 1968, when they were declared ineligible for OCA events," Leon Sykes of Toronto, secretary of the OCA announced Tuesday.

The four did not intend to play as a unit during the 1968-69 season. Phillips has been in the process of forming a new rink.

Curlers in Ontario and New Brunswick are forbidden to accept prizes worth more than $150 a man because of the Code of Ethics, adopted by curling organizations in those provinces several years ago.

Bathgate Cut By Penguins

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Andy Bathgate, leading scorer in the National Hockey League's western division last season, was cut Tuesday by Pittsburgh Penguins.

Bathgate, 36, obtained in the 1967 expansion draft by Pittsburgh, scored 20 goals and 30 assists in the 1967-68 season.

A native of Winnipeg, Bathgate has played continuously in the NHL since 1954-55.

Canadian Ideas Carried to UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, who on Wednesday, Oct. 9, will give the world community Canada's views on its many problems, arrived here by air Tuesday.

He plunged at once into a busy round of meetings and receptions which will allow him to exchange views with representatives of many of the 125 UN members.

On the Canadian minister's schedule Tuesday night were two receptions—one by the United States mission for State Secretary Dean Rusk, and one at the Fifth Avenue residence of Ambassador George Ignatieff, Canada's permanent UN representative, for the Canadian delegation to the 23rd General Assembly.

Sharp has a private discussion with Rusk scheduled for today.

Rusk, who this morning delivers the major U.S. speech as the assembly opens its debate on world affairs, pressed efforts Tuesday to promote a settlement in the Middle East.

He had what he called a "very useful" discussion with Gunnar Jarring, the UN's Middle East envoy. Later he had a private 1½-hour conversation with Jordanian Foreign Minister Abdel Moneim Rifai.

Rifai said the Middle East was reviewed but he denied any new peace plan had been proposed to him by Rusk.

Jarring, on leave from his post as Swedish ambassador to Moscow, has been trying to arrange indirect negotiations between Israel and the Arabs, with himself as intermediary.

Israel has been insisting publicly on direct negotiations with the Arab states, and the Arabs have just as adamantly refused to sit down at a conference table with the Israelis.

A Security Council resolution last Nov. 22 established the Jarring mission, charged with the task of arranging a Middle East peace based on withdrawal of Israeli troops from Arab lands it occupied in the brief June, 1967, war and ending the Arab state of war with Israel.

Informed sources said some indirect contacts between the parties already had taken place.

Sharp

Reversal

Reversal of earlier willingness to discuss dispute over ownership of Sabah with Philippines was announced Tuesday by Malaysian Prime Minister Rahman. He said summit meeting now would fail only if Sabah was put to one side and charged reason was the Philippines' "trail of broken promises."

Czechs Push for Kremlin Talk

PRAGUE (UPI) — Czechoslovak leaders Tuesday asked the Soviet Union to invite them to the Kremlin this week for the twice-postponed meeting on "normalization" and troop withdrawal, Communist party sources said.

The sources said the men around Alexander Dubcek were persuaded the time was ripe to bargain from relative strength as a result of Tuesday's early recess of the International Communist party meeting in Budapest.

They said the decision of Budapest conferees to put off a decision on the Soviet Union's call for a world Communist party congress in Moscow reflected obvious dissension over the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

A decision on the Kremlin meeting date is expected sometime today.

In Moscow, Tass printed a warning that "normalization in Czechoslovak political life is proceeding at a slow pace and is running against the opposition of anti-socialist forces."

Disclosure of the Czechoslovak move came after party sources said Soviet deputy foreign minister Vasily Kuznetsov, the Kremlin's chief representative in Prague, made a secret visit to Moscow over the weekend. They said Kuznetsov apparently was seeking new instructions.

Door Closing Against Fortas

WASHINGTON (UPI — The U.S. Senate all but killed Abe Fortas' nomination as chief justice Tuesday in a slap at an "activist" supreme court and a lame-duck President Johnson.

By a 45 to 43 vote, the Senate refused to curb the filibuster which had blocked a vote on the president's nomination of his longtime adviser to succeed Earl Warren, who had planned to step down once a successor was approved.

The vote was 14 short of the two-thirds majority required to invoke the parliamentary device of cloture which would have limited the debate, making possible an eventual vote on the nomination.

So strong was the opposition that it seemed unlikely Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield would even try again to bring up the nomination for a vote.

Only once before in U.S. history has the Senate turned down a president's nominee for chief justice, in 1795 when it refused to approve George Washington's appointment of John Rutledge.

Wilson Rallying Cry

Backers Told to Be Patient —Payoff for Britain Near

BLACKPOOL, England (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson said Tuesday his government's economic policy is just starting to pay off and urged his supporters to make sure the Labor party stays in power to collect the benefits.

Wilson warned repeatedly that a Conservative party victory would cheat the Labor party of the economic reward it painfully struggled to build during the last few years.

His speech to the party's annual conference was regarded as a rallying cry for the party, which suffered a string of resounding defeats in byelections earlier this year.

Wilson said criticism must not stop the government from adopting unpopular economic measures it considers necessary to get Britain out of the red. At its first session Monday, the conference voted decisively against the government's policy of limiting wage increases to halt inflation.

In his first major speech in months, Wilson worked his way through an hour-long review of Britain's accomplishments, contrasting them to the Conservative party record of earlier years. Then he pounded home his basic message—that the time has come for Labor to snap out of its defensive attitude and develop a new aggressiveness.

SCORN RECALLED

He acknowledged that industrial reconstruction had taken time. He recalled the scorn heaped on the government's decision to establish a ministry of technology to create a British computer industry and to make fundamental changes in certain industries.

Now, Wilson said, "all the work of those days is bearing fruit in export order after export order, headlined almost daily."

COMPUTER STRENGTH

He described Britain's computer industry as the most powerful outside the United States. Without naming France, he contrasted Britain's accomplishment to that of countries "not very far away" which he said tamely allow their computer industries to submit to the American invasion.

On defence, Rilson rejected any "unilateral, go-it-alone, do-it-yourself, military adventures or Suez imperialism."

He said Britain's new role lies fundamentally in Europe, based on NATO.

Mao's Purge Widened On Anniversary

TOKYO (AP) —Red China marked its 19th anniversary Tuesday with an announcement that Communist party chairman Mao Tse-tung's purge is to be widened and deepened to "purify" the 17,000,000 party members.

Mao's top aide and heir-apparent, Defence Minister Lin Piao, told 500,000 cheering Chinese in Peking's Tien An Men—Gate of Heavenly Peace—Square at the height of nationwide celebrations: "We definitely will liberate Taiwan (Nationalist-held Formosa) and are ready at all times to wipe out all enemies who dare to invade us."

Despite these tough words, broadcast from Peking, the accent was more on the internal politics of the proletarian cultural revolution, launched 26 months ago, than on the oft-repeated fear of an American attack as Mao and his associates reviewed the annual parade through the huge square.

Japanese correspondents reported workers and peasants dominated the march, reflecting Mao's new priorities for these classes. The fanatic Red Guards—stars of last year's show—brought up the rear, evidence they have been down-graded.

Army troops carried no weapons.

In a National Day joint editorial, the People's Daily, Liberation Army Daily and Theoretical Journal Red Flag said the purge—which has been concentrated at the top—now will "lay the basis for the work of consolidating and building the party by conscientiously purifying the class ranks."

The objective is to shake up the party's now predominantly intellectual—military structure to include "advanced elements among the industrial workers"—the class Mao has decreed shall henceforth lead the cultural revolution.

The editorial also advocated making room in the "party's basic organizations and the party committees at all levels" for Communists who have "stood firmly" by Mao's line.

North Vietnam, North Korea and Albania in the Communist bloc staged celebrations of their own and sent messages of congratulations to the Peking leadership.

The Soviet dispatched a note addressed only to the "Chinese people."

Squeezing Of Biafra Tightened

LAGOS (Reuters) — A federal army squeeze on the shrunken secessionist state of Biafra tightened Tuesday following the capture of the important crossroads town of Okigwi in the Nigerian civil war.

The hilltop town is the northern gateway to Umuahia, 25 miles away, where Biafran leader Lt.-Col. Odumegwu Ojukwu is believed leading a last-ditch defence from a concrete bunker.

News of the capture, which an official statement said took place Monday, reached Lagos on Tuesday, the eighth anniversary of Nigeria's independence from Britain.

Federal head-of-state Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon marked the occasion with a call to his troops to put a quick end to the 15-month war.

In a separate message to his countrymen, he said: "I am confident that by the time we celebrate our next independence anniversary, peace and normalcy will have been fully restored in every part of this country."

Lighted Match Kills 30

LOURENCO MARQUES (AP)—More than 30 Africans are feared dead from an explosion and fire which sank a ferry boat in Pungo Bay Monday night, reports reaching this Mozambique capital said Tuesday.

The ferry, carrying 62 men and four women, was travelling between the port city of Beira and the small sugar estates town of Buzi.

Survivors said the engine stopped and a crew member struck a match to see in the engine room. The match was believed to have ignited diesel fumes.

'Still Same Demand'

Hanoi Brushes Off Humphrey Pledge

PARIS (AP) — U.S. Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey's qualified bomb-halt pledge was brushed off by a North Vietnamese spokesman here Tuesday as "still the same demand for reciprocity which we reject."

The North Vietnamese have long spurned American demands for prior assurances that the Communists display matching restraint after a U.S. halt in the bombing of the North. They have insisted instead that a cut-off of American military action against the North must be unconditional.

In a broadcast Monday, Humphrey said that if elected president of the United States in November he would stop bombing the North but only if he saw "evidence of Communist willingness to restore the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam."

Le Duc Tho, Hanoi politburo member and one of the North Vietnamese delegates at the peace talks here, said he saw "absolutely nothing new" in Humphrey's offer.

The implication appeared to be that it did not differ from President Johnson's position.

The North Vietnamese have offered verbal assurances that "positive efforts" would follow an unconditional American bombing halt, but the Humphrey pledge was viewed as by no means unconditional.

VOTE BID

The Soviet news agency Tass also said "no new approach" could be detected in Humphrey's speech.

It said Humphrey's speech was "clearly calculated to win over to his side the numerous voters resolutely denouncing the dirty war in Vietnam and demanding that it be ended."

Some foreign diplomats felt, however, that Hanoi might surprise its Moscow supporters, as it did when it accepted Johnson's offer of preliminary peace talks in Paris.

RESPONSE

They reasoned that Hanoi could calculate Democratic candidate Humphrey will prove easier to deal with than any of his rivals. Following this logic, the North Vietnamese might decide to make a response to his speech, thus hoping to ease his way into the White House.

Officials in the U.S. delegation here declined all comment on Humphrey's speech, obeying orders to steer clear of the presidential election campaign.

IDENTITY CARDS

The South Vietnamese government Tuesday began issuing new identity cards to everyone in South Vietnam 15 or older, an operation that will take three years. The government said the new cards would assist in restricting the free movement of persons both into and out of Viet Cong contested areas.

Saigon reports the toll of American warplanes shot down in the Vietnam war mounted Tuesday when the U.S. command announced the loss of a fighter-bomber and two helicopters.

Spokesmen reported only light ground fighting in South Vietnam.

AIRCREW MISSING

A U.S. Navy A-6 Intruder from the carrier Constellation downed by anti-aircraft fire Monday, was, by American count, the 901st U.S. warplane lost over North Vietnam. Its two crew members were listed as missing.

U.S. commanders hope that the battleship New Jersey, which entered the war Monday by bombarding heavily fortified North Vietnamese gun emplacements, will help reduce aircraft losses. The New Jersey's guns can reach targets 23 miles away and can penetrate fortifications that might be invulnerable to aerial bombing.

'Stick You Under Jail'

Yells Upset Wallace

From LAT, UPI

Young protesters made points —or had points made against them—in three U.S. news reports Wednesday:

● In Lansing, Mich., the daily verbal battle between third-party presidential candidate George Wallace and young hecklers took its ugliest turn.

* * *

Their screams of "Nazi" so unnerved Wallace that he shouted: "Some of you college students who've been raising blood, money and clothes for the Viet Cong—we gonna drag you by the hair and stick you under the jail.

"Some of you anarchists better have your day now because after Nov. 5 you are through."

● In Washington, police barred Chicago Yippie leader Jerry Rubin from entering a congressional hearing into Chicago's Democratic convention riots. Rubin, who was not due to testify until today, was allowed to enter after he shed a bandalero of live bullets that he carried around his body.

Rubin

* * *

Yippies at the hearing roared disapproval when House Un-American activities committee researcher James Gallagher said the Chicago disorders were planned to support the Viet Cong and disrupt the U.S. political system.

● Also in Washington, the annual FBI report expressed "grave concern" over the inroads of Soviet and Red Chinese espionage in both the black nationalist movement and the "new left" on college campuses.

Second Mexican Dies, Murder Charges Sure

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI)—A second of 46 Mexican nationals found locked in an unventilated and abandoned truck died Tuesday. The U.S. Immigration Service picked up two more trucks carrying Mexicans across the border "to Chicago."

Four other men were in critical condition. The seven were expected to be released and turned over to immigration authorities, who had jailed the 33 other survivors for illegal entry.

San Antonio police said they would file murder charges against whoever was responsible for abandoning the two-ton truck Monday in a residential section, where residents called police after they heard screaming and pounding from inside the vehicle.

Two more camper trucks were stopped near the border Tuesday. One carried 15 Mexicans and the other 17, and some of the occupants told officers they had been promised jobs in Chicago. Drivers of the two trucks were charged with unlawfully transporting illegal immigrants.

Survivors from the truck abandoned in San Antonio said they also had been promised jobs in Chicago. They paid 100 to 150 pesos, about $10 to $12 in U.S. currency, for the trip.

Three More Montreal Murders

Gangland Killings Mushroom

MONTREAL (CP) — The toll of gangland-style slayings in the Montreal area mounted Tuesday with the discovery of three bullet-riddled bodies—two jammed into the trunk of flaming car and another in the office of a north-end electronics firm.

* * *

A police spokesman said the three slayings bring this year's total of "underworld killings" to 28.

The car-trunk victims of the fourth double slaying since February were discovered after firemen were called to a flaming car in the city's north end Tuesday.

When the trunk was opened the bodies of the two men—identified by police as Howie Russel of suburban Chateauguay and James Alexander Farrel of suburban LaSalle, both 28—were found along with two revolvers and a box of ammunition.

* * *

Only a few hours earlier, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Lyborn were found lying on the floor of his north-end office, both shot several times in the head from behind.

Lyborn, 60, part-owner of the electronics firm, was dead. His wife, 45, was in extremely critical condition with three .32-calibre bullet wounds in the head.

Also Tuesday, police identified the body of a young man found Sunday in a car cemetery near Huntingdon, 20 miles southeast of Montreal, as that of George Groom, 32, believed to be a Montrealer.

* * *

The car-trunk slaying was almost a carbon copy of a similar killing last Saturday.

Andre Corbeil, 24, and his 22-year-old wife Claudette were discovered wrapped in blood-stained blankets in the trunk of their late-model car.

Suspects have been brought to court in connection with only two of the killings which have occurred since last February.

Rain Floods Kill 19

TAIPEI (Reuters) — Widespread floods following 24 hours of continuous torrential rain in Formosa left 19 persons dead and set off landslides, cutting rail and road traffic. Fifteen persons are missing in the floods, which washed away 227 houses.

Advance Polls In Esquimalt

Esquimalt council unanimously passed an advance polling bylaw Monday bringing the municipality in line with other municipalities in Greater Victoria.

Bus Blasted

SAIGON (AP) — A civilian bus hit a road mine 15 miles south Da Nang, killing 11 South Vietnamese and wounding 32 others.

Area Engineer

Saanich municipal engineer Neville Life has been elected president of the Public Works Association of B.C. at the annual meeting in Williams Lake. He succeeds J. A. Kenyon of Port Moody.

Statutes Become Bilingual

OTTAWA (CP) — The 28th Parliament passed its first piece of legislation Tuesday, a measure to have statutes published with English and French text side by side in the same volumes.

There was no opposition to the amendments to the Publication of Statutes Act. They won swift approval in principle and clause-by-clause approval.

English Students Enrol Privately

MONTREAL (CP) — Registration of Grade 1 students in private English-language classes began Tuesday in suburban St. Leonard, scene of conflict over a local school board decision to eliminate gradually bilingual instruction in elementary schools.

Robert Beale, president of the Association of Parents of St. Leonard, which represents English-speaking Roman Catholic parents, many of them immigrants, said 240 have been registered in the private classes and more are expected.

The Grade 1 students, whose private classes are to begin today, are those immediately affected by a resolution passed in June by the St. Leonard board which has the effect of forcing all English-speaking students entering elementary school for the first time to attend French-only classes.

The board later mitigated the effect of the resolution when it agreed to pay the cost of transportation to elementary schools in adjacent suburbs for Grade 1 pupils from St. Leonard whose mother tongue is English.

However, it made no such provision for children whose immigrant parents have been insisting on bilingual instruction.

Last week's verdict in Quebec Superior Court rejecting a petition for a temporary injunction from two dissident members of the St. Leonard board seeking to prevent implementation of the unilingualism resolution was "only a first step," Mr. Beale said.

APPEAL PLANNED

The parents' association and school commissioners John Papa and Leo Perusse planned to go to the Quebec Court of Appeals, within the 30 days provided by law, to seek reversal of the judgment by Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols in the lower court.

Charles Flam, an associate of Claude-Armand Sheppard, prominent civil rights advocate and legal counsel for the dissident commissioners and the parents' association, said the press has misinterpreted the decision of Mr. Justice Nichols as being an endorsementof the fundamental legality of the resolution.

PRINCIPAL ACTION

Mr. Flam said the petition for a temporary injunction was contained "in the principal action" instituted in Superior Court and requesting that the court "declare the resolution illegal."

The principal action was still before the court and would not likely be heard until winter or spring since it had to wait its turn on the crowded court order.

Quebec Premier Eulogized

'Faithful Man' Buried

ST. PIE, Que. (CP) — Daniel Johnson, eulogized as a man "faithful to Quebec," was buried Tuesday, in this community 40 miles southeast of Montreal.

More than 3,000 persons crowded the small cemetery as Quebec's 20th premier was laid to rest in a half-ton coffin.

Justice Minister Jean-Jacques Bertrand—whose graveside eulogy was missed by most of the spectators because of noise from light aircraft circling the cemetery—said of Mr. Johnson:

"Because of you, Quebec has progressed. You have been faithful to Quebec.

"He (Johnson) belongs to the annals of the province."

Johnson had been a great Canadian and a great Quebecer, the justice minister said.

Most cabinet ministers, who shook hands with the Johnson family shortly before ceremonies were over, were weeping quietly.

The body was taken by hearse from the parish church almost a mile to the cemetery in this village in the riding of Bagot, which Johnson represented in the legislature since 1946.

At the head of the slow-moving cortege were more than a dozen Roman Catholic priests wearing white surplices and black soutanes. Among them was Bishop Albert Sanschagrin of nearby St. Hyacinthe.

The bishop had conducted the Libera service at the parish church and later led mourners in prayer at the graveside.

Mrs. Johnson, wearing the widow's veil and dress she had donned when she learned of her husband's sudden death, fought back tears during the graveside ceremony.

Handed the fleur-de-lys flag of Quebec which had covered the coffin, she kissed it and joined hands over it with her four children—Marc, 23, Daniel, Jr., 21, Marie, 15, and Diane, 18. Also with the family was Mrs. Daniel Johnson, Jr.

UVic Getting 1969 Grant Bennett Mum on Sum

All B.C. universities will get new capital grants next year, Premier Bennett confirmed Tuesday, but in the case of the University of Victoria he isn't saying how much.

The premier said the $8,200,000 extra for Simon Fraser University expansion, which he announced at the Peace River last weekend, meant also "all universities are going to get more money."

This would happen, Mr. Bennett added, not withstanding the fact that the current five-year capital financing scheme for the three major universities would run out at the end of the fiscal year next March 31.

Asked if he was planning another five-year financing arrangement, Mr. Bennett said: "I'm not saying that. We are making this amount (the $8,200,000 for SFU) available even though the five-year plan has run out. All our universities will benefit."

He denied suggestions that the latest announcement of funds for expansion of SFU actually covers the same ground as a $12,000,000 expansion program for the university announced last May by then education minister Leslie Peterson.

FIGURE REQUESTED

"All I know is that this is the figure ($8,200,000) they requested and this is what we are giving them."

He refused to disclose the amount of similar grants to UVic and the University of B.C., saying SFU "just had these contracts ready to go" and so the government acted at once, but the premier said all the universities "will be treated equally fairly."

Water Research Vital To Stop Squandering

OTTAWA (CP) — The benefits of Canada's huge water resources could be squandered unless more money is pumped quickly into research, the Science Council of Canada warned Tuesday.

A special council study group called for a major national effort in the water resource research field, with universities and private industry carrying more of the burden for such studies where the federal, provincial and municipal governments now are doing the lion's share.

It also suggests Canada has to move quickly into these research areas dealing with problems of prime importance to the country.

Included here was the question of possible water export. Canada should not embark on any export program without knowing the full extent of her present resources and future needs.

MORE TO COME

The report of the council, which advises the federal government on science matters, said some $8,400,000 was spent on water resources research in 1967-68. It suggests this would be raised to $25,000,000 by 1972-73 and to $75,000,000 by 1978-79.

Canadian governments spent 66 per cent of the $8,400,000 in 1967-68, universities 19 per cent, industries 14 per cent and other researchers one per cent.

The water cycle—how water occurs and where it goes—and water quality management should be two key areas for Canadian research, the council said.

Interior Link Pledged

The provincial government said Tuesday it is going ahead with creation of a new highway route to the Interior, through the Pemberton Valley to Lillooet.

The statement came as $250,000 was allocated for work on the section between Lillooet and D'Arcy, where a jeep road that is impassable to normal traffic provides the only Pemberton-Lillooet road link.

The government also said $57,000 will be spent on dredging, riprap and extension of storm sewer outfalls at the Campbell River ferry terminal.

Papal Plea For Love Universal

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican has appealed to Roman Catholics to join with other Christians and members of all other faiths in an international program of contacts with atheists to help make the world "more human."

The appeal, issued Tuesday in the Vatican's secretariat for non-believers, said such a program of dialogue is not intended to convert people but to express "brotherly love" and to meet a policy-making document by the needs of "a humanity come of age."

Such dialogue, said the document, would be "every form of meeting and communication between individuals, groups and communities to bring about a greater grasp of the truth and to achieve better human relations in a spirit of sincerity, respect for persons, and mutual trust."

Communists were included among the non-believers. The Vatican recommended that all types of atheists should be met in contacts and discussions at the local, national and international levels.

MAJOR CHANGE

In the light of the Roman Catholic Church's long history of suspicion toward contacts with atheists, this stand by the Holy See signalled a major change.

The document, two years in the making, was seen as a major victory for the view expressed by the late Pope John XXIII that men could work together despite philosophical differences.

Pope Paul gave the 5,700-word document, titled "Dialogue with Non-believers," his full approval. Sources said the pontiff did so despite his own increased uneasiness toward Communists caused by the Soviet-bloc invasion of Czechoslovakia.

DIALOGUES OFF?

Franzishus Cardinal Koenig of Austria, president of the secretariat for non-believers, presenting the document at a news conference, said that, "after the events in Prague, I fear that probably these dialogues (between Vatican and Czechoslovak officials) will no longer be possible."

The secretariat warned that discussions with atheists carry risks for Catholics. It recommended that Catholics be thoroughly prepared for such discussions so as not to endanger their own faith.

Gouzenko Damages Too Low

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada has agreed with a jury's finding that Maclean's magazine libelled ex-Soviet cipher clerk Igor Gouzenko in its Sept. 5, 1964, edition.

In a 4-to-1 judgment, the high court found fault, however, with the award of $1 damage given to Gouzenko by the jury. It ordered a new trial restricted to the issue of damages only.

In an article written by the late Blair Fraser, the magazine reviewed Canadian events of the 1940s and devoted part of it to the role played by Gouzenko in unearthing a giant Soviet spy ring. Gouzenko charged the article downgraded his part in exposing the ring and also injured him as an author and as a person.

John Wasylenchuk

Crime Figure Dies Driving

VANCOUVER (UPI)—John Wasylenchuk, 56, an ex-convict who made headlines four years ago when his extradition to the U.S. sparked a stormy debate in the House of Commons, died Tuesday in Burnaby.

Wasylenchuk collapsed while driving and was pronounced dead on arrival at Royal Columbian Hospital. He was believed to have suffered a heart attack.

Wasylenchuk

Wasylenchuk was acquitted in April, 1954, of first-degree murder and armed robbery of a north Seattle bank earlier that year during which one policeman was killed and two others seriously wounded.

Nine years after the holdup, however, in October, 1963, he was arrested while working as a roofer on a Vancouver apartment project and again charged with murder and robbery.

* * *

In December, 1963, he was extradited to the U.S. despite heated protests in the Commons.

Less than four months later a U.S. federal court in Seattle took less than 24 hours to return a not guilty verdict on both charges. His innocence was substantiated by retired RCMP sergeant Ernest Nuttall, who testified Wasylenchuk was in his Burnaby home within one hour of the time the robbery was committed.

Nuttall died soon after.

Coast Guard Rescue

Tugmen Taken From Sandbar

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four crew members of the tug Swiftsure III were rescued from a sandbar near Steveston Wednesday after spending three hours in a life raft with winds gusting to 50 miles an hour.

The vessel was abandoned before it sank in shallow water near the mouth of the Fraser River.

The raft was towed to the coast guard cutter Racer after the larger vessel found it impossible to get closer than 200 feet to the men because of the heavy seas.

A skindiver swam to the raft with a tow line.

Lawrence Hey of Burnaby, B.C. captain of the New Westminster tug, said the 46-foot vessel got into trouble shortly after midnight when a crew member reported water in the engine room.

He radioed that the ship was in trouble in heavy seas, then the crew took to the life raft.

He fired rockets and two parachute flares in the three hours before rescue.

"We didn't think we were going to make it," he said.

The other crew members were Wilfred Cartwright of Langley, mate, and deck hands Bob Woof of Surrey and Dave Miles of Fort Langley.

Racer led the search and a harbor patrol boat and three other tugs took part.

Vancouver NDP Waits for 1970

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city's recently - formed New Democratic Party Civic Affairs Association has voted itself out of December's civic elections.

Delegates attending a convention founding the association voted against fielding candidates this year and set their sights on a full slate in 1970.

Subdivision

Planners Take To Print

By DON GAIN

Saanich citizens will be the best informed in the area if they keep up with the publications of the municipality's planning department.

Planner T. W. Lonsy is issuing today the second in a series of pamphlets dealing with the various aspects of planning, its relationship to the citizen and its role in local government.

Subdivision and the Citizen is the title of the second pamphlet. The first one, issued two years ago, was on zoning.

PURPOSE OF PAMPHLET

Purpose of the pamphlet, as explained by the planner in the introduction, is to discuss what subdivision is about, why local government regulates subdivision, where the authority for regulation comes from, and finally to give the reader an insight into the subdivision procedure should he wish to submit an application to subdivide his property.

Saanich council recently approved a new subdivision and development bylaw which will regulate such matters in the municipality for some years to come.

Contents of the pamphlet are arranged in a question-and-answer form, with charts and plans to illustrate certain points. Sprightly cartoons, including the one on the cover, were drawn by planning aide Edward Larsen.

'GRANITE GULCH'

No one will find a Granite Gulch subdivision at the corner of Lapidary Lane and Gallstone Street in Saanich, but it's in the pamphlet, thanks to Mr. Larsen.

The pamphlets are available free of charge at the municipal hall.

Here are the questions answered in the pamphlet: What is subdivision? Why should subdivisions be regulated by the municipality? Where does the authority come from? How is a subdivision proposal initiated? When is a surveyor's plan required and when does he enter the subdivision process? Engineering designs and construction of services — who is responsible?

'STATIC RED TAPE'

In conclusion, the planner points out that "regulations, planning-oriented or not, should never become entrenched into a static mound of red tape and bureaucracy."

"The world today is changing so very rapidly that today's solutions to problems are sometimes not applicable for very long. Innovation and new approaches should be essentially a part of municipal government as it is a part of the private sector of the economy.

"As for the developer, he must consider that he is creating a marketable commodity with which he must enter the marketplace and make a profit. He must also consider that he is creating or helping to create an environment within which people live.

FUTURE GENERATIONS

Mr. Lonsy explains that patterns established today will affect future generations and, as technology develops, many plans will become obsolete.

But neighborhoods created by a combination of intelligent regulation and intelligent development will possess an enduring quality which will benefit the community in the future.

Fistful of No-Fine Forms

Latest weapons for law enforcement in Greater Victoria are made of paper —forms carried by police under new no-fine system being tried here. Constable David Mellin of city force fans out Traffic Violation Report pad, Traffic Offence Notice pad, Notice of Juvenile Offence, case summary report and accident report forms. Only first two are new for system that began Monday.—(Jim Ryan)

Colony Inn

Major Motel All But Sold For $1,250,000

A $1,250,000 deal involving a change of ownership of the Colony Motor Inn will probably take place before Oct. 10, the Colonist learned Tuesday.

Although the principals were reluctant to make positive statements at this time it was indicated that ownership of the large Douglas Street establishment, which includes beverage rooms, cocktail lounge, motel accommodation and dining room, will be taken over by the firm which owns Halfway House, 856 Esquimalt Road.

Manager of Halfway House is George Laak. He could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

THREE BROTHERS

President and managing director of the Colony is Gerald L. Carter. Other members of the firm are his two brothers, Donald and Gordon. They are also proprietors of Individual Dry Cleaners Ltd.

It was understood Tuesday that all that was holding up formal closure of the transaction was the transfer of the Colony liquor licence to the new owners. This transfer is expected to take five or six days.

FINANCIAL DEAL

Gerald Carter said that if the deal was completed he did not expect that the new owners would make any changes in management. The transfer would be more in the nature of a financial transaction than anything else, he said.

He expected that he and his brothers would devote themselves to investment in Victoria. The opportunities in this district are limitless, he added.

Gardener Creepy Crawler

It was a creepy case for Saanich police Tuesday: a woman called them to complain that a man was crawling around in her yard.

Constables hurried to investigate and found the gardener hired by the people next door going about his work on hands and knees.

Full Time Job

Peter S. McCarthy has been appointed field executive on regional headquarters staff by Greater Victoria Regional Scout Council. Mr. McCarthy is from St. John, N.B. where he was associated with scouting as a scoutmaster and Venturer adviser. As field executive, a full time position with the scout movement, he will be responsible for assisting Victoria Scout Council in training of adult members, camping and program activities.

Major Substation For Gordon Head

A major electrical substation will be built in Gordon Head "in the next few years," according to a B.C. Hydro and Power Authority spokesman.

The authority has just acquired a 4.7-acre site on Gordon Head Road and McCoy, near the junction of Ruby and Gordon Head. It will be used for a substation to supply the rapidly growing area which now has no substation.

Integration Sought, Not Lock-Step Plan

The Canadian School Trustees' Association seeks integration of provincial school curriculums, not uniformity, Greater Victoria School Board chairman Peter Bunn said Tuesday.

Mr. Bunn said reports of a CSTA resolution in Ottawa last week had been misinterpreted.

The CSTA convention, which he attended, asked the recently-formed council of education ministers to study curriculum "with a view to develop an integrated educational curricula across Canada . . ." said Mr. Bunn.

"There was no suggestion that we create a lock-step system, with all children studying the same book at the same time," said Mr. Bunn.

"The idea is that approximately the same sort of thing would be going on."

Intent of the resolution was to make it easier for Canadians to move back and forth across Canada, he said.

Year-Round Schools Use

Trustees Opposed

Teachers and trustees are lining up on opposite sides over the question of a 12-month school year.

Year-round schooling is favored in the report of the B.C. Teachers' Federation commission on education, released Monday.

* * *

Opposed to the change are Frank Beinder, president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association, and Peter Bunn, chairman of the Greater Victoria school board.

Mr. Bunn headed a committee which earlier this year prepared a study on school utilization. The report, endorsed by the BCSTA executive, opposed the 12-month school year.

The teachers' commission said:

"Schools should be used for the full 12 months.

"Experiments should be conducted in a variety of organizational schemes using the 12-month school year.

* * *

Mr. Beinder said from Trail on Tuesday that the BCSTA study opposed operating the schools in summer because it would disrupt family life.

One child might have holidays in summer and another child in the same family might have holidays scheduled in winter, he observed.

Mr. Beinder said humanitarian aspects outweighed the increased efficiency of summer operation.

* * *

Mr. Bunn said his committee made recommendations that schools be used in summer for special classes.

"We came out against 12-month use of schools in the way they are now used for nine months," he said.

Mr. Bunn said schools could profitably be used in summer for adult education and in conjunction with community colleges.

* * *

High school students might attend remedial and enrichment classes at their option, he said.

Mr. Bunn said the trustees' committee also recommended that schools be used six days a week, though students would attend only five out of seven.

Though he differed with the teachers' commission on summer schooling, Mr. Bunn praised the general tone of the commission's report.

"It sounds like a breath of fresh air," he said.

Boarder Limit Stays Despite Student Plea

By NANCY BROWN

Despite a shortage of housing for University of Victoria students, Oak Bay council has no intention of relaxing restrictions passed last spring limiting student boarders to two per household.

Mayor Fred Hawes and Ald. Francis Elford made their position clear Tuesday night as 25 students prepared to continue a tent-in in front of the student union building to protest the shortage of low-income accommodation.

"I agree that council's attitude appears to be contradictory, but I'm sure there would be insufficient council support for a motion to allow more than two boarders in a house," said Mrs. Elford.

COUNCIL SUPPORT

A month ago a proposal to lower the voting age in municipal elections to 19 received unanimous support from council.

At that time Mrs. Elford said she had been impressed by the responsibility shown by young people.

The resolution will go before the next Union of B.C. Municipalities convention, Mrs. Elford said, regretting that it was too late for last month's convention.

NOW PROTEST

"A month ago we were given to understand that sufficient housing had been provided for students this year, and now we have this protest," said Mrs. Elford.

"I'd like to know the exact size of the problem. If there are only a few students in poor accommodation we might be able to do something, but if there are 200 or so the problem seems insurmountable."

She said the only answer is a provincial grant to provide student buildings on campus.

"In spite of our bylaw I know of several homes in Oak Bay with more than two university students," said Mrs. Elford, "but I don't intend to do anything about it unless neighbors complain."

"I think the students are just going to have to improve their reputation by being model boarders," she said.

"Perhaps some of these landladies who take students year after year will come forward with stories of contentment to counteract the inevitable complaints of the few difficult boarders."

TAX PROBLEM

She said she understands there is also some income tax difficulty in taking more than two boarders as the rent paid is counted as income, and could prove a problem.

There will be no co-operative housing in Oak Bay even in apartment zones, she said, because the bylaw applies to the entire municipality not just to residential zones.

She agrees that landladies would be unfair to expect their university boarders to take over baby sitting and housekeeping chores on a regular and confining basis.

SOME CHORES

However, said Mrs. Elford, students could show a co-operative attitude towards reasonable requests and try out accommodation which included baby sitting chores.

"It's a two-way street. People don't want to be confined to providing three meals a day for boarders if the boarders are unreasonable about helping out.

"After all if these students were living at home they would doubtless be expected to do some chores."

Mayor Hawes said at other universities, churches of various faiths have provided student housing buildings.

"There has been no effort in Victoria along these lines," he said.

He felt students should do less protesting and more co-operating.

"I've had three complaints this week from people who have student boarders and have trouble with them," he said.

"This kind of thing puts other would-be landladies off."

MORE JOINING

Van Charnell, spokesman for the camping students said student support is increasing, and he feels more students will soon join the 25 currently sleeping out.

There have been complaints that students aren't interested in accommodation offered if they are required to do any work in return, but students council president Frank Frketich said students worry as to how duties will cut into study time.

Saanich Concerned

Funds Would Aid Slipping Schools

By BILL STAVDAL

Saanich school district has slipped backward in the past year for lack of new classrooms, said superintendent Robert Price on Tuesday.

The quality of education will deteriorate more unless ratepayers approve a $4,000,000 construction referendum Oct. 19, said Mr. Price.

The superintendent and members of the Saanich School Board spoke at a press conference on the need for continuation of the district's building program.

Construction stopped last winter after defeat of a $554,000 supplementary referendum needed to complete previously-scheduled projects. School board chairman Nora Lindsay said the result this fall is that schools are holding classes in lunch rooms, auditorium stages, a former paint storage room, and in five former school libraries.

"It gets a little worse every day," said Mrs. Lindsay.

The school board is seeking approval to spend $4,082,400 over the next three years.

Ratepayers would contribute only one-quarter; the government pays the remainder, said Mrs. Lindsay.

No new schools are planned under referendum 11, said buildings superintendent Bryan Shaw. But every school in the district will be either renovated or enlarged to cope with growing enrolment.

The district also plans to buy 79 acres in new school sites or to enlarge existing sites.

* * *

Mr. Price said the district's enrolment, which now stands at 4,850, will in three years be "in excess of 5,800."

Mrs. Lindsay said that the building program will cost ratepayers about half a mill the first year, 1.3 mills the second year and two mills in the third year, decreasing slowly thereafter.

Property with market value of $16,000 to $18,000 would pay about $3 the first year, $7 in the second and $8.50 in the third, and less in following years, she said.

In its land acquisition program the board plans to buy a Sidney site for a second senior high school, two new sites for junior high schools and four sites for elementary schools.

Mr. Shaw said the schools will be built under later referendums.

ERMA BOMBECK's Housing Crisis

When You Gotta Go...

Every year in the United States, one out of every five persons moves to another dwelling. This column is the first of a three-part series on The American Gypsy. Today's chapter: Let's Blow This Firetrap.

We had two good weeks in our house, then it happened. The rooms shrunk, the cupboards disappeared and the schools and the shopping centres moved. The lawn spread, the closets diminished and no one could find the garage that the buyer swore went with the house. "Maybe we could start looking for a larger house," I suggested.

"Indeed not!" said my husband. "I'm sick and tired of moving everytime the ashtrays fill up. We stay!"

★ ★ ★

He would need a little convincing.

"Why am I sleeping with the storm windows?" he asked one morning.

"You little devil, you noticed."

"I noticed," he said. "Why am I sleeping with the storm windows?"

"It's a mistake," I said. "The boys are supposed to sleep with the storm windows. You're supposed to sleep with the bicycles. There's no storage space in this house."

"You're as subtle as bad breath," he said. "We stay."

★ ★ ★

"I love these advanced schools out here," I continued. "Did I tell you the primary grades are putting on 'The Graduate' for a Christmas pageant?"

"We stay," he persisted.

"I hope you're not in your safe office worrying around about us all day in a house with a front door that won't lock, a clogged up flue, an overloaded kitchen circuit, and Smokey The Bear posting signs all over the attic. The front spicket is broken, the lawn is ridden with crab grass, two dining room windows are stuffed with paper towels, the front door snaps behind you like a trap, the bathroom tile is rusting, and I took the Sears catalogue out of the bathroom. When the wind whistles down the vent . . ."

★ ★ ★

"Maybe we'd better start looking around . . ."

"I've already written the ad," I smiled. "'Charming, three-bedroom home in the suburbs you have to see to believe. Spacious rooms, storage, fireplace, two baths, many extras. Convenient to progressive schools and shopping centre. Will sacrifice to family who promises to love it.' What are you doing?"

"I'm making a list of things that have to be done. I had no idea the house was that bad. Where's your pride, woman? Do you want people to think we live this way?"

★ ★ ★

Later that night we read the ad. "I'll miss your homemade screens. Remember the night we almost named a mosquito in our divorce suit?"

"That was nothing compared to the day we hung wallpaper in the hallway. And your daffodil bulbs. Remember? You planted them upside down and it took three years for them to come up?"

"I love this kitchen. The trees are just beginning to look finished. We brought three babies to this happy house."

"I hope no one buys it," he said.

"Me too!" I sobbed.

October—the Month for Cheese

We Canadians always seem to be celebrating something or other. Centenaries we can put behind us but things like salad weeks, milk and butter weeks, etc., are always with us.

Now we are facing a whole month of cheese. The word from the Canadian Dairy Foods Service Bureau has it that October is cheese festival time.

So if you are not a cheese fan you can stop reading now. But take heart, macaroni week is Oct. 17 to 26 and Thanksgiving is between now and then.

★ ★ ★

That perennial favorite, cheese fondue, can be blamed on the Swiss. That is if you are one of those cooks who turn out rubbery looking messes and call it fondue. I don't have much luck with fondue so am apt to ignore them.

However the following recipe is said to be sure-fire as well as easy to make.

You probably know that this dish should be accompanied by crusty French bread for dipping, but did you know that if you lose your bread while dunking you are expected to kiss the person who happens to be beside you?

I don't suppose it would matter which side the person was standing but it might be just as well to take a good look and be a little choosy before taking your own place beside the table.

CHEESE FONDUE

1¼ cups dry white wine, 1 clove of garlic, 4 cups (1 pound) shredded Canadian process Swiss cheese, 1 teaspoon cornstarch, 3 tablespoons Kirsch, a few grains nutmeg.

Simmer wine and coarsely chopped garlic until reduced to 1 cup. Strain out garlic. Pour wine into chafing dish and bring to boil. Lower heat at once so wine barely simmers and add cheese by handfuls, stirring constantly with wooden spoon.

Keep stirring until cheese is smoothly melted. (You won't run into trouble if you keep heat low). Dissolve cornstarch in Kirsch and stir into cheese mixture. Continue stirring for two or 3 more minutes then season with nutmeg. Serve from chafing dish over low burner.

This amount makes four to six servings.

Cheese and Meatballs

1½ pounds lean ground beef, 1-3 cup breadcrumbs, ¼ cup milk, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon onion salt, ¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning, 1¾ cup cheddar cheese, cut in cubes, ¼ cup water, ½ cup sliced green onions, 2 (10 ounce) cans sliced mushrooms, ¼ cup butter, ¼ cup chopped parsley, 6 tablespoons flour, freshly ground pepper, 2 (10 ounce) cans beef consomme.

Break up meat with a fork in a bowl and add bread crumbs, milk, eggs, salt and poultry seasoning. Mix lightly. Press meat firmly around cubes of cheese, shaping into balls. Be sure to cover cheese completely. Place in a single layer in shallow baking dish. Bake in oven preheated to 500 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes or until lightly browned.

While meat is cooking saute green onions in butter over medium heat. Blend in flour. Gradually stir in consomme, water and undrained mushrooms. Simmer, stirring constantly, until smooth and thick. Add meatballs and simmer gently for five minutes. Serve in chafing dish. Sprinkle with parsley and ground pepper.

You don't have to wait until making onion soup before adding cheese for added flavor to soup. Try these for a change.

Celery Cheese Soup

1 can cream of celery soup, 1 cup whole milk, 1 cup water, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon sherry, parika, 1½ cup grated cheese. Gouda or Edam are good for this.

Heat soup and milk. Mix flour with cold water. Add to soup stirring constantly until thickened. Grate cheese with fine vegetable shredder and add to soup. Over low heat, stir constantly until cheese melts. If heat is too high, cheese tends to become stringy. Reheat or keep warm over hot water in top of double boiler. Garnish with paprika. This amount is enough for four persons.

Red and Gold Soup

It is quite a simple thing to add cheese to liven up a can of tomato soup.

Heat the soup according to instructions on the can. Spoon a mixture of grated cheese, Edam and Gouda are good here, too, and chopped parsley, about four parts cheese and one of parsley over soup and serve.

Cheese of course makes wonderful appetizers and snacks.

Ham-n-Cheese—Place a cube of cheese between two tiny cubes of ham on skewer or pick.

Pineapple-n-Cheese—Place a wedge of pineapple between on skewer or pick.

Olive-n-Cheese—Place a cube of cheese and stuffed green or pitted ripe olive on skewer or pick.

Cakes for Fall Bazaar

Sons of Scotland Ladies Auxiliary will hold fall bazaar and tea Saturday from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Knights of Pythias hall, 723 Cormorant. Event will be opened by Mrs. Hugh Stephen. In the picture young Ken O'Hara watches Mrs. James Weir, president, left, and Mrs. Mary Nicolson, decorate cakes for the sale.

Party Later For 100

Thomas Lokier of 2455 Hamiota is 100 years old today but the party isn't until Thursday. Then it will be open house for his friends and relations. There will also be another party for Mr. Lokier Wednesday, Oct. 9, in the Silver Threads auditorium in Centennial Square.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am engaged to marry a young man I have gone with for two years. Vern's mother disliked me intensely from the moment we met. His father acts as if I don't exist. I've tried hard to win them over but I have failed miserably.

To please Vern's family I joined their church. I used to wear my hair long until his mother suggested I cut it. She insists on helping me select clothes because she says I have no taste. I stopped wearing pearlized nail polish because she said it looked cheap.

It is agony to have dinner with Vern's parents because of the long periods of silence. Last night I attempted to make some small talk and Vern's mother said, "Why don't you stop babbling?" I was so hurt I almost cried.

Vern's older brother married a girl they consider "inferior" socially and intellectually. Her life has been hell. I love Vern very much but I'm beginning to wonder if I have the strength to marry into this family. What do you think?—Plain Jayne.

Wart on a Pickle?

Dear Jayne: You don't say boo about Vern's attitude. What does he say when his parents put you down? Does he just sit there like a wart on a pickle? If so, you're going to wind up alongside your future sister-in-law. The key to your future with Vern lies in his ability to give you the emotional support you need to withstand his parents' hostility. If you can count on him, say "yes"—otherwise, forget it.

Dear Ann Landers: A close relative spends a great deal of time in our home. He is twice my age and I hesitate to be disrespectful. However, our children are now 5, 7 and 9 and they pick up words easily.

This relative calls certain racial groups by names which I abhor — Wop, Kike, Chink, Spic, Spade, Hunkie and so on. I have given him dirty looks but he ignores me. My husband says it isn't worth the trouble I might run into if I hit him head on. What do you say?—Midwesterner.

Clobber Ignoramus

Dear Mid: I say clobber the ignoramus. Such talk should not be tolerated. Children learn a great deal more from example than from instruction. If you want them to be good Canadians, teach them to respect all people.

□

Dear Ann Landers: You have written a lot about alcoholism as a sickness. What about cheating fathers? Is that a sickness, too?

My father is 44, good-looking, appears to be younger and I always thought he and my mother were very happy. Last year my mother confided in me that my father has been running around with another woman. Since I learned of his unfaithfulness I have been unable to be civil to him. Our home life is horrible.

Don't tell me to talk it over with anyone. I'm too ashamed. Please tell me what to do. I feel so helpless—ABC

Dear A: There is nothing you can do, which is why it's unfortunate your mother told you. She should have "confided in" someone else if she felt the need to unburden herself. A clergyman or a counsellor would have been more judicious choices.

Probe Told:

Paycheques Not Equal

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government should "forcibly and immediately" eliminate discrimination against women on the job by setting up an effective fair employment commission, Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said Tuesday.

Presenting the CLC's 28-page brief to the royal commission on the status of women, MacDonald said he thinks prejudices against women in matters of employment are their basic problem.

* * *

"We must provide immediate and real relief for those who are victims of this prejudice," the president of the 1,500,000-member labor body said.

"Sex discrimination is widespread but we do not think it is as virulent as race prejudice and therefore we think forceful legislation could eliminate it."

MacDonald got into trouble with his fiery vice-president Huguette Plamondon, when in reply to a commission question about the CLC's own practice regarding female members he insisted that the congress "makes no distinction between male and female members."

* * *

"I don't fully agree with the president," Miss Plamondon said quickly.

"Organized labor has done the biggest job around to improve the lot of women but it is not doing the job it should.

"Too often women workers are neglected when a labor agreement is negotiated. Only a small number of unions have actually insisted on parity in job classifications and base wage rates.

* * *

"By admitting these weaknesses we will do a better job."

MacDonald said that the suggested fair employment commission would have the job of ensuring that employers give female workers equal pay for comparable work and provide them with equal opportunity in hiring and advancement.

* * *

"The commission should be able to investigate practices in the industry and to examine and process complaints. It should be given whatever funds and staff are necessary to do the job."

At present the federal equal pay act is administered by the women's bureau of the labor department, an organization that employs only a stenographer and a clerk and which has not had a director for six months.

MacDonald said the government should pass a fair employment act to be administered by the proposed commission. This act should forbid both unions and employers to discriminate in any manner on the basis of sex.

MacDonald backed his case for the need to eliminate sex prejudice on the job by saying that jobs most frequently occupied by women—such as clerks, telephone operators, typists, hairdressers or laundrers — seldom lead to advancement and are lower paid than areas where women do not predominate.

"We might add that even in those industries where women predominate, any males who may be working in it generally fare better financially."

Temperance Union Field Secretary:

Close Universities to All Rebels

By NANCY BROWN

Universities should close their classes to students who revolt against them, says Mrs. Francis Hitchcock, provincial field secretary to the Women's Temperance Union.

"The taxpayer is footing the bill for the universities and if these students aren't prepared to work and achieve their goals then, they should stay out of classes until they are," she said.

* * *

Mrs. Hitchcock, who talked to more than 42,000 high school students last year, was in Victoria Tuesday to address the Rockland Park Women's Christian Temperance Union.

"Why are we so afraid of our young people? Why do we pay so much attention to that small eight per cent who cause trouble—the hippies and drop outs?

"They want to see standards set so that they can have some security," she said after the meeting.

* * *

"We talk to much about freedom, and they demand it, but freedom is nothing without self discipline and this is what the student must learn before he demands freedom and the right to make decisions."

Mrs. Hitchcock said she would like to see both press and public ignore the trouble makers until they attain the standards of the majority of hard-working young people.

"As soon as a teenager drops out of school or becomes a hippy, we rally all our community resources to save him. Why shouldn't the student who isn't in trouble have the same advantages and help if he is helping himself?" she demanded.

* * *

"These children are like alcoholics—no one can help them until they are willing to realize they are wrong and seek help. That is the time to step in."

Mrs. Hitchcock said drugs have replaced alcohol as the problem of the young.

"I would say the vast majority of high school students have experimented with the drug—I'm sure this is the case in Vancouver," she said. "I am concentrating on work with 12 and 13 year olds."

* * *

"The biggest problem is a society which makes them grow up too quickly and demands too much.

"We push students into university knowing quite well that probably only a third of them are university material.

"We have films and books on sex, and talk incessantly about sex education, all the time pushing these children who would probably still rather be children instead of pseudo-adults."

* * *

Mrs. Hitchcock feels that not only parents but also schools and employers are contributing to the pressure on students.

"They demand too much and parents know that their children just have to attain certain standards of education no matter what their talents and interests are.

"Employers demand far too much before they will accept anyone for training. They lose students who would be ideal because they demand conformity, and the school system grades students in accordance with the employers' demands," she said.

* * *

In working with young people she has met many who were given LSD without knowing what they were taking.

"It would be put on a peanut butter sandwich, and they would be completely unaware until they were way out on a trip," she said.

They are mixing drugs, lacing marijuana with LSD, STP, or hashish. "Two told me they like a mixture of marijuana and heroin," she said.

"At the same time they are getting stronger drugs than they realize, often thinking they are buying locally-grown marijuana when in fact they are getting the more potent products of Turkey and Mexico."

* * *

"The kids say our generation was ruined by alcohol," said Mrs. Hitchcock, "so they are taking drugs to expand, not ruin their minds. They don't know what they are talking about.

"I know three young people who took LSD out of curiosity and now they are back in school, they say they just can't concentrate any more.

"These kids were just curious, they're not criminals, but they are paying a terrible price."

Mrs. Hitchcock said the problem of runaways is increasing.

"More children are running away from home and they are harder to find than ever before," she said.

"They are being hidden, usually by the hippy group and by the time they are traced the damage is done."

Mrs. Hitchcock will be back in Victoria in November to talk to youth groups and school children.

A Lovelier You

Pick Right Makeup Base To Match Skin Type

By MARY SUE MILLER

Pawder bases have the power to improve the quality of your skin in many ways. All bases offer protection from harsh weather, air-borne grime and powder clog. In a complementary tint, a base enhances the quality of your skin's coloring and provides a lovely finish for your face.

If you do not use a base, or fail to use the right type, you obviously miss a big beauty plus. Now that tans recede and fall fashion colors come forward, the time is ripe to choose the base or bases you need.

Do not make the mistake of using the same base for years without questioning its effectiveness. Your skin changes and bases change. At present bases are formulated to produce a translucent look — a clarity and glow that seems to spring from within the skin. Maskiness is not in the picture; when it appears it looks dated.

You will of course want a base that agrees with your skin type — dry to normal, oily to normal, blemished or discolored. For each condition, bases come in many forms from cream, liquid, cake to stick. The best one for you is the one you can handle best.

Whatever your choice, be sure to apply it with a light hand to a well-cleansed and toned skin. Underline applications as need be with a moisturizer, color toner or spot camouflage. Check results in a strong light. A makeup is only as good as its foundation.

ABOUTV

with Bruce Louther

Quite a few people watch the Smothers Brothers twice on Sundays, I know, because they asked me this week why the later CBS effort didn't have five minutes that CTV had earlier, plus several bluish jokes.

First, CBS and NBC have ordered the producers of each more-than-30-minute show to cut five minutes from one episode between now and Nov. 5 to allow a money-making U.S. presidential plug (CTV doesn't have to do that). Second, Laugh-In and Smothers jokes blue-pencilled by network censors are cut for the U.S. alone (CTV can censor what it wants). There'll be several more five-minute cuts—and lots more blue-pencil cuts.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Tuesday's two-for-the-show answer—As far as I'm concerned, Walter Pidgeon is inseparably linked to Greer Garson, Lauritz Melchior to Kirsten Flagstad, Errol Flynn to Olivia de Havilland and Lillian Russell to Diamond Jim Brady. Gee, this is an exciting game.

Today's question — Welcome to the World Series, in which 11 pitchers have won three games in a single series. De

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

In modern bidding it is often necessary to choose between a contract in no trump or in a 4-4 trump suit. To guide this decision, here are some tips that are not widely known.

If you hold more than sufficient points, you should tend to play at no trump. If you are short on points, you should tend to play at a 4-4 fit.

Furthermore, you should be much more inclined to opt for a 4-4 fit at slam level than at game level.

On this deal six no-trump would have been a poor contract. (North-South were short on points.) But six hearts was a very fair bet indeed.

Declarer won the diamond opening and decided to go for two diamond ruffs. He would then have six trump tricks, plus two diamond tricks and a spade, and would need only three tricks in clubs.

However, after ruffing diamonds twice, it would be impossible to get back to dummy to draw trumps, except with the spade ace. Later, if the club finesse failed, declarer would be wide open in spades.

Declarer overcame this snag by careful timing. He cashed A-K of diamonds, crossed to a trump in dummy, ruffed a diamond, and made the key play of leading the club jack!

West could do no better than return a club. Dummy was entered with a trump, and the last diamond was ruffed.

The spade ace put dummy in to cash two more trumps, while declarer threw spades. South's club continuation then won the last three tricks.

TOYOTA COROLLA

"THE CLEANEST ECONOMY CAR EVER TO COME FROM THE OTHER SIDE OF THE OCEAN."

Who wants an economy car that wasn't put out of its own way and is left behind on the hills. The TOYOTA COROLLA has more power, a higher top speed and better acceleration than any other car in the 1,100 or class. And it still gets better than 40 miles on a gallon of regular gas.

RADICALLY DIFFERENT

We are looking for a buyer who is (1) A REBEL AGAINST CONVENTIONAL DESIGN and (2) A PERSON WHO WANTS I know you're going to find it difficult to believe that. Yes, being serious, but this home has the garden INSIDE the house. The living room is semi-circular. The kitchen is in the master bedroom, and the den has no walls plumbed. The lot is 100x125 and it is newly treed and enclosed. A quiet dead-end street, not close to shopping. Lake Hill area. IMMEDIATE POSSESSION. Price $28,950. Don Brown, 383-2424.

UNIVERSITY AREA QUIET CUL-DE-SAC

Beautifully situated on a large artistically landscaped lot. Tower home with their dignity and accent the lovely rustic appeal of this unique and unusual five year old home. From the secluded front courtyard you enter a foyer which leads up to the main floor. Picture a lovely, big living room with antique brick fireplace. Beautiful bay window with window seat, ceiling gourmet sound proofing and custom wall to wall carpeting. The open plan family dining room has a lovely outlook off. The kitchen is modern and pretty with golden oak cupboards. BUILT-IN Tappan range and oven, refrigerator, built-in vacuum. There is a second outlook which is beautifully shaded for cool summer relaxing. Three lovely bedrooms, one could be a study, and a pretty 3-pce. bathroom complete the Main floor. On the lower level there are two more finished bedrooms and a second Vanity bathroom. There is room provided for a Rec. room (3'x12') and the fireplace is already in. Huge utility room has every convenience. This lovely home is quality built and the Chandeliers and other fixtures are very beautiful. The rustic exterior of rough cedar board and batten, antique brick and shakes is most appealing and blends perfectly with the Mature landscaping. For further details please Eileen Hughes 385-3628 or 477-2228.

Plan for Centre Praised by Ney

NANAIMO — Marine Gardens Association met with Nanaimo city council in committee on Monday.

The meeting was for information only. The association told council about work for the recreation-convention centre, proposed by the association.

The centre will house a theatre, which would be convertible from 400 seats to 900 seats. The plan would allow for comfortable use by amateurs or professional shows, council has been told.

* * *

Plans call for a total expenditure of $1,500,000. The centre will have a large auditorium and a T-shaped 25-metre pool with diving facilities.

Mayor Frank Ney said Tuesday that the project is both needed and welcome. He said it would give a new character to the Vancouver Island's central area.

"This project is something that's badly needed in the community. It's a big project. We're waiting for the association to make its first step," he said.

"There's a tremendous increase in the young people in the area and recreation is being strained more and more," he said.

Maury Loudoun, association secretary, said the meeting was for only information only, not to ask Nanaimo city for funds, land or concrete support.

"In the final analysis, it will be the area residents who will build it. The Gyros originally promoted it. The association now is doing the ground work in research to show residents realistic plans," he said.

* * *

"It's going to take everybody pulling for it — all municipalities, all groups, and all service clubs," he said.

Mayor Ney said if the project was assumed by the regional district, the mill rate "would be surprisingly small." It would relieve all areas of a recreational burden by providing one large facility instead of several small and inefficient ones.

Band Appoints New Secretary

Mrs. Diane Modeste, newly appointed secretary of Cowichan Indian band council, watches Jim Nahanee, 21, her new clerical assistant, try out typewriter. Mr. Nahanee is from North Vancouver Indian band. Mrs. Modeste succeeds Louise Underwood who resigned recently after holding position for several years. Mrs. Modeste has been working in band office since May, 1966, as clerical assistant. She is wife of Wesley Modeste, band's community health worker. — (Klaus Muenter)

No Date For Election

OTTAWA (CP) — No conclusion has yet been reached on a date for a byelection in the Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands riding, "but one is forthcoming," said Prime Minister Trudeau on Tuesday.

He was replying in the Commons to fervent Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker. The seat was left vacant by the death of New Democrat Colin Cameron.

Silencer Coming For Mill

LADYSMITH—Residents who are angry about the noise from Ladysmith Forest Products sawmill may soon be soothed.

Mayor Kay Goushel, referring to a complaint Monday, told town council that mill manager Joseph Frumento has assured her that the company is waiting for special equipment to reduce the noise.

She said: "Mr. Frumento told me the equipment, which is on its way now, will be installed late this month or in early November."

Council will advertise for a dog warden in an effort to curb a dog problem in Ladysmith.

A letter will be sent to the Union of British Columbia municipalities executive suggesting provision of special seminars to aid elected local government representatives.

Right-Wingers Embattled

BONN (Reuters)—Police Tuesday night broke up the extreme right-wing National Democratic Party's first political rally in Bonn after party supporters and opponents turned the Beethoven Memorial Hall into a battlefield.

Police halted the meeting when a tear-gas bomb fell onto the stage and sent party leader Adolf von Thadden reeling back from the microphone.

Students Turn Anti-Olympics

MEXICO CITY (Reuters) — Some 4,000 students roared their approval Tuesday night as their leaders vowed to continue the fight with the government even if it means disrupting Mexico City's Olympic Games, scheduled to open in 10 days.

This was the first time that the students have expressed an anti-Olympic feeling in more than two months of unrest.

Tenders Opened

Tenders for reconstruction of 12.9 miles of the Lake Cowichan Road were opened by the highways department Tuesday.

The low bid among 10 tenders received was for $1,125,195.30 by the Vancouver-based firm of Jervis Inlet Gravel Ltd.

Award of the contract will be announced after bids have been evaluated, a spokesman said.

Nanaimo Conservation Officer:

Bragging Pitlampers Not Good Hunters

By ARNOLD OLSON

NANAIMO — Pitlampers and poachers are not good sportsmen and they are not very good hunters, claims Nanaimo conservation officer.

Leo van Tine of the fish and wildlife branch, said the pitlampers are people who admit to themselves they aren't good enough to get their animals in daylight hours.

He said that he and another officer, Dennis Wilder, spend 12 to 16 hours a day during the hunting season patrolling for pitlampers and poachers.

However, the public serves as a large body of unofficial patrollers, he said. A great deal of charges are laid because of information volunteered by private citizens.

NIGHT FEEDING

"We get to know when people are enjoying seeing coveys of birds with their young. We know there's bound to be a poacher snooping around there too. We give those areas particular attention.

"We've got scores of spots to feed at night that are where deer are known to cross to feed at night that are patrolled regularly as well," he added.

"We prefer to approach suspicious persons before any shooting and scare them off first. Prevention is better than waiting people into breaking the law by letting it appear that the birds and animals are unprotected," he said.

'NO SPORTSMEN'

Mr. van Tine said the pitlamper thinks he is not being seen and that no one knows what he is doing.

He said some of them have even bragged about their ability to get game illegally and that they thought they were good hunters and sportsmen.

But that is not the case, he said.

Pitlampers are especially difficult to bring to court because they work in the quiet of the night and are hard to trap with evidence.

"Certainly pitlampers and poachers get away with animals and birds but sooner or later we'll nail them," he asserted.

"Binoculars work both ways —for the poacher and for us. He never knows for sure if a chump of trees has one of us in there watching him in action. The pitlamper's light can be seen for a long distance in the dark. It filters through branches, and fog. We watch for that little blink of light and nab the culprits on their way out of the bush—sometimes even while they're dressing their kill," he said.

"The minimum fine for pitlamping is $500 and that could buy a lot of beef."

Mr. van Tine says he understands why some hunters who are usually noted as skilled man will pitlamp. They are ashamed to admit defeat.

"It takes a good hunter, a man, to go through a season legally. He passes up shots at illegal game or shots that might only wound and he finishes the season empty-handed. He feels he has failed and he is ashamed to admit it.

"There is a great temptation to take illegal measures when it seems he is goint to be skunked for the season but it takes a good man to allow himself to be skunked and take a bit of ribbing from his friends down at the pub.

'EASY WAY'

"Only the ones who really have nothing on the ball as men have to stoop to hunting at night or in parks."

"Most hunters are good sportsmen though," he added. "It's only the poor sports who find they have to take the easy way out."

Legion Women Receive Charter

GOLD RIVER — The ladies auxiliary to Gold River Royal Canadian Legion received its charter at a weekend meeting.

The event was marked by a dance and smorgasbord, provided by Legion members, in the elementary school gymnasium.

* * *

About 30 visitors from Campbell River and other Island points attended. The Campbell River contingent was played in by its pipe band which also provided a concert and played for Mrs. Marie Woods, auxiliary president, when she received the charter from Mrs. Bertha Bowen, Vancouver Island north zone representative.

Mrs. Mary Wheram, auxiliary secretary, said "It was a most successful evening."

It has been decided to give the proceeds from ticket sales to the community church organ fund. The auxiliary gave $100 last June for the church building fund.

* * *

North Central Vancouver Island zone of Comox presented $50 to the auxiliary for equipment.

Rev. and Mrs. Dave McKay won a pole lamp competition.

Aid Changes For Indians

DUNCAN—When Indians require legal aid in future, they will be directed to the provincial attorney-general's department.

In the past requests were handled through the Indian Affairs department.

Reporting from a recent meeting of the Cowichan Indian Band Council, new secretary Mrs. Diane Modeste said the move is a result of recent discussions with the provincial department and the Law Society of British Columbia.

Mrs. Modeste pointed out that "legal aid is now available to Indians as to all citizens, including cases where Indians are charged with murder."

Ross Modeste, band manager, was appointed to the Grants to Bands committee for British Columbia. The purpose of the committee is to study the present grants to band councils.

Fulton Will Join Vancouver Firm

E. Davie Fulton, who served as justice minister and public works minister in the cabinet of John Diefenbaker, is moving to Vancouver where he will join a law firm.

The former Conservative MP for Kamloops and one-time provincial leader of the Tory party lost the seat he had held for 23 years last June 25. He was defeated by Liberal Len Marchand, Canada's first Indian MP.

Mr. Fulton gave no details of his prospective association with the Vancouver law firm which was not identified in his statement.

It said: "It has been very difficult for me to decide to leave Kamloops, which has been my home for 32 years, and where Mrs. Fulton, my children and I had the happiest possible family life since 1946. My professional and business associations here have been long and happy.

"However, as a result of the election I am faced with the necessity of establishing a new career, and have had a variety of attractive offers from both eastern and western Canada, all of which I appreciate.

"As between the alternatives offered, our love of British Columbia, the fact that this is my own home and has been my family's home for generations, and our confidence that this province stands on the threshold of exciting and virtually unlimited growth, have decided us in favor of Vancouver."

Chess Club Loses 19 Draws One

The 20 members of the Elizabeth Fisher junior high school chess club managed only a draw Tuesday in simultaneous exhibition play with last year's B.C. Centennial Open champion, Ray Kerr of Victoria.

After 2½ hours of play, Mr. Kerr won 19 games while Gary Ashdown earned a draw. The exhibition was the first of its kind in this area and may lead to similar exhibitions in other schools.

Garden Notes

Sprouts Sprouting

By M. V. CHESNUT

One of the results of our abnormal rainfall in August and September has been over-exuberant growth in brussel sprouts. I must have had at least thirty letters this past few weeks complaining that the sprouts have been growing like crazy and are not "buttoning" as they should. If your plants are producing nothing but large leaves and open, loose sprouts, there are a few tricks known to old-time gardeners to remedy this situation.

One of the simplest is "cocking" or "pinching." This means the removal of the growing point, which not only prevents any further upward growth, but also induces the formation of firm buttons.

* * *

The growing point in the centre of the top rosette of leaves is pinched out; this is a bit roughly the size of a walnut. I must make it clear that the complete beheading of the plant — cutting off the whole top rosette — is not good for the plant; just remove the very heart of the top.

Remember, too, that brussels sprouts require very firm ground to make quality sprouts and, if by chance your plants were set out on ground which is soft and loose or spongy, it will pay you to firm it even at this late date. Don't, of course, go trumping on the soil while it is wet and soggy, but wait for a fine spell and tread firmly around each plant.

* * *

A touch of potash is very good for sprouts at this season of the year and, in fact, for any green vegetables which are to stand outdoors into winter weather, for potash hardens soft, sappy growth and makes it more weather-resistant.

If you have wood ashes available, these can be scratched into the surface around each plant at the rate of two cupfuls per plant, otherwise use sulphate of potash or muriate of potash, two tablespoonfuls per gallon of water and about one quart per plant.

Another stunt I have seen used with some success is what might be called a form of root pruning. You thrust a digging fork into the ground, slanting the tines deeply under a plant, then lever up slowly and gently with the intention of breaking the tap root low down without too much disturbance of the upper roots.

You can usually feel something "give" when the tap root breaks, after which the ground is made firm again by treading. The point of the operation is to check exuberant growth and shock the plant into sprout production.

One very common mistake in the harvesting of sprouts is to pull or tear the buttons from the stalk. This is bad business, for invariably a strip of skin is torn away from the stem, creating a jagged wound for disease organisms to enter, and giving the whole plant a setback which jeopardizes the younger buttons remaining on the stem.

* * *

Actually, sprouts should never be picked, but cut off, using a small sharp knife. The cut is made close under the base of the rosette or button, thereby leaving a short stub of stem attached to the main stalk. By leaving this stub, you encourage the production of small secondary side growths, not tightly buttoned like the proper sprouts but good enough for a feed of boiled greens after the main crop of sprouts is finished.

Another important point is selective picking. Take only a few of the largest sprouts from each plant, spreading your picking over as many plants as possible. This will conserve the crop and keep the crop coming over quite a long period of time.

ART HOPPE Dreams Ahead

Wallace Keeps Promises

The election of George Wallace to the Presidency in November of 1968 through a coalition of Southern States, Border States, Northern suburbs and other bigots came as no surprise to astute political observers. But his first day in the White House did.

For President Wallace kept every single one of his campaign promises.

* * *

It was a most productive first day in office. Arising early, the president went for a drive, ran over a Hippie, threw a briefcase-toting bureaucrat in the Potomac, run over a Yippie, grabbed a pseudo-intellectual by his beard and tossed him under a specially-constructed jailhouse on the South Lawn and, well-refreshed, called in his new Secretary of State, Orville Crackers of Tallahoussee, Ga.

"First smack dab thing, Orville," said the President, "I want you to cut all these snot-nosed furrin States off at the pockets and not give 'em one more dime of our hard-earned money."

"Right as rain, George," said the Secretary. "Lessee, there's New York, Oregon, Vermont . . ."

"And don't fergit them there other ones overseas," said the President, "whatever their names are. Now bring in them generals."

* * *

When the Joint Chiefs of Staff had assembled, the president said, "Lookit here, boys. If'n I give you half a million more men and a couple a billion more dollars, can you win that there war in Vee-yet-nam P.D.Q.?"

The Generals looked startled. "Well, Mr. President," said one, "I think we could safely promise great progress toward the light at the end of the . . ."

"I figured as much," said the President. "Go git our boys back home and tell them slanty-eyed gooks they ain't fit for a white man to fight for."

Having re-made U.S. foreign and fiscal policies and ended the war in Vietnam, President Wallace had a leisurely lunch before calling up his new Attorney General, Melvin Murd of Pinole, Miss., to remind him to throw all the crooks in the country in jail.

* * *

"And you'd better toss in the Supreme Court, too, Melvin, and the pinko press for good measure."

"And if any of the pseudo-intellectuals raise a fuss, beat a little law and order into their thick skulls."

Having kept every single campaign promise, Mr. Wallace couldn't think of anything else to do. So he resigned before dinner.

* * *

Unfortunately, as he was leaving town, he mistook the bearded Russian Ambassador for a briefcase-carry Hippie. Confused, he ran over the briefcase and threw the ambassador in the Potomac.

An angry Moscow called on the Hot Line. But seeing Mr. Wallace had never gotten around to picking a vice-president, no one answered. The frustrated Soviets launched a nuclear attack, wiping out the U.S.

But as Mr. Wallace himself had often said during his campaign, "Ah'm livin' proof that anybody can be president of these here United States."

Which is certainly true. And let's not forget it.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Bob Signs Ann-Margret

HOLLYWOOD — Bob Hope is collecting his people for the annual Christmas trip to Vietnam. Ann-Margret will supply some of the glamor. When Bob taped her television special recently, he mused, "how can the two most glamorous people in the world be on the same program?" This will be Ann-Margret's second time in Vietnam.

* * *

When you see Brigitte Bardot shooting a gun in Shalako, notice that her eyes are wide open. Apparently women shoot with their eyes open — and without flinching! The weaker sex? . . . Alan Alda, who plays George Plimpton in Paper Lion, told me that during the making of the film thieves took off with about $300,000 worth of camera equipment. New stuff was rented within 20 minutes of discovery of the loss, but Alan growled, "we're about half an hour behind schedule now."

* * *

Shelley Winters wrote a play and Paul Newman is interested in it for wife Joanne Woodward. Shelley had originally wanted her boyfriend (now ex) Don Stroud to do it on Broadway. He declined on learning that he and the lady lead would have to do two acts more or less in the nude. It can be sold on those stages.

* * *

Rod Steiger and Claire Bloom put through an urgent order that the bedroom scenes in their Three Into Two Won't Go must not be used for publicity or advertising . . . One reason why Dyan Cannon was glad that she did not sign for the co-starring role with Don Knotts at universal in The Love God was because ex-husband Cary Grant has a bungalow office suite on the same lot. The Grants are getting on better these days and I believe that, even at this late stage, Cary would like a reconciliation. Dyan, however, is the adamant type. Instead she will be making Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice for Mike Frankovich at Columbia.

* * *

Julie Harris is the girl for Stewart Granger in Kill Me Once, Kill Me Twice, for the World Premiere series. Granger, making his first U.S. picture in years, was all set to stay in Mexico City for the filming but the housing situation, due to the forthcoming Olympics, is impossible and the picture will be shot at Malibu instead.

* * *

Edmund O'Brien and Olga San Juan chalk up 20 years of married bliss next month . . . Candy Bergen was saying on the set of The Adventurers, "I don't think it matters much whether Nixon or Humphrey is elected. I'm a liberal and I'm mad. There's no one on the national level left to consider the thoughts of the young people who must fight the wars and build the future. America is becoming a country for the old, the conservative and the frightened."

* * *

Well here are some young 'uns who are doing fine — the Cowsills Group who have signed a deal for $1,000,000 with the American Dairy Association. The youngest member is eight years old.

* * *

The rich get richer. Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor paid about $20,000 for their shares in the Harlech television group in Wales. The certificates are now worth close to $250,000. Elizabeth by the way insists she feels well enough to start The Only Game in Town at the end of the month. It will start filming in Paris with Warren Beatty. Her friends and doctors would rather she waited another month.

* * *

Frank Gorshin's standing-room-only business at the Sahara has put him on the same plateau as Don Rickles and Buddy Hackett. The management has given Frank a three-year deal, four weeks each year.

Talking of the Sahara, Shari Lewis is fiddling while Jack Benny burns. Jack and Shari are a big draw at the hotel.

* * *

And while we are with the singers, Peggy Lee will cut an album directly from a performance at her umpteenth appearance at New York's Copacabana.

* * *

And a final bit of news — Eddie Fisher, who brought the film rights of Paint Your Wagon to Paramount, now has nothing visible to do with the production. It is not even sure whether he will get executive producer credit. In any case he has not been near or had anything to do with the actual filming.

No Two Look Alike

SYDNEY HARRIS

Many animals don't recognize their own young. It takes them a long time to distinguish between their own children and other babies of the same species.

The most obvious fact about the human species stares us in the face so freely that we fail to see it. And that is the utter diversity and individuality of each member of the human race.

* * *

No two persons — except twins from the same egg — really look alike. Every fingerprint in the world is different. So is the precise composition of blood. Nature had made us the only individuated species in the world.

Almost nothing in nature is without a purpose. There must be some reason that the highest member on the evolutionary tree is also the only species in which individual traits are more distinguishing than generic ones.

* * *

The reason is not far to seek nor hard to find. Among humans alone, it is diversity that protects and perpetuates the species; while among the lower animals, it is blind uniformity that keeps them going. They adapt to their environment; we are made to change ours. And if all of us were more alike than different, we would become extinct when conditions drastically change.

Thus, there is a biological as well as a moral imperative against all forms of racism in the human species. We need millions of different kinds of persons in order to ensure our survival; reducing the species to one particular kind — whether white, black, yellow, or speckled — would sharply lower the odds for our continuance on the earth.

All foxes behave like one fox, all clams like one clam, all owls like one owl. Only man runs the gamut of actions and reactions. And, just as nature may produce a million spermatozoa in order that only a few may turn into living forms, so it provides us with the widest diversity of individuals so that a few might survive the most cataclysmic changes in the environment.

* * *

Those who prate about "pure blood" and "race lines" are as ignorant as they are mischievous. We are all of one blood and of one ancestry, and our family ties as a species are far more significant than our superficial differences of ethnic background.

The paradox in this whole matter is that we are created so highly individualized in order to secure the welfare of the species; yet unless we place the welfare of our species above our own partial loyalties, we will lose our individuality and the earth along with it. The only effective way to guard our differences is to affirm our unity.

Queen Frowns On Snaps Use

Elizabeth

LONDON (AP) — The Queen has asked British editors to refrain from publishing "personal and intimate" photographs which appeared Wednesday in a French news magazine, Buckingham Palace said.

The 16 black and white photographs include six of the Queen sitting up in bed in the royal bedroom. In four she is holding infant Prince Edward, born in 1964.

It was understood in London before publication in the magazine Paris Match that some pictures showed her nursing the infant, but no such pictures appeared.

The royal request not to publish the photographs in Britain is not binding on editors, but they would be likely to respect it out of courtesy to the monarch.

* * *

"The Queen has requested that because of the very personal and intimate nature of the photographs they should not be shown in this country," said a palace spokesman. "No one at the palace has any idea how they came to be available to the French magazine."

A Paris Match spokesman said the photographs were "in perfect taste . . . They are all very delightful pictures which tell their own story of the life of the Royal family at the time of the birth of Prince Edward."

* * *

He said the pictures were handed over to the magazine by an Englishman "whose identity is not being revealed." He said they were copies and the magazine did not have the original negatives.

He said the photos appeared to have been taken by an amateur, and sources close to the royal court regarded it as inconceivable that any professional cameraman would have been present at such intimate family moments.

There was immediate speculation that the pictures were made by members of the Royal Family and belong to the Queen's private album.

* * *

Besides the set showing the Queen sitting up in bed, one set of five is labelled as including Queen Elizabeth and Queen Ingrid of Denmark at "an intimate reception." The other blurred figures are said to include King Constantine and Queen Ann-Marie of Greece, Don Juan Carlos of Spain and Queen Mother Frederika of Greece. Most of the figures are standing holding cups.

A third set of five shows the Queen in coat and head scarf; Prince Andrew and Princess Anne standing up against what appears to be a stone garage; Prince Philip in a swim suit; Prince Charles holding two large fish; Charles and Andrew in a plastic wading pool, and Edward, with his nurse, Andrew, Charles and Anne.

Vancouver Trial

Taped Phone Calls Make Court First

VANCOUVER (CP)—Recordings of telephone conversations tapped by police were used in B.C. Supreme Court Monday to enable a Vancouver man to identify voices of persons he alleges confined him in their clubhouse Feb. 22 and subjected him to indecencies.

It was the first time in B.C. that the tapping by police of private telephone conversations was used in evidence in a criminal trial.

On trial before Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm and an all-male jury are: Robert Wayne Pearson, David James Black, Herbert Albert Spivey, Charles Allan Dumont, Victor Gregory, William Cross, William Binns, Gary Wilbur, Laverne Schmidt and Aubrey Baker.

All are from the Vancouver area except Wilbur, of Red Deer Alta., and Baker, of Edmonton.

They are charged with illegally confining and indecently assaulting James Cannam at a clubhouse belonging to the Satan's Angeles motorcycle gang.

Cannam alleges the 10 abducted him from a restaurant and took him to the clubhouse where he claims he was stripped, beaten and abused.

'We Will Come In'

Prison Rioters Told Surrender or Else

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — A tough-talking official broke the back of a riot at South Carolina's main penitentiary Tuesday by warning prisoners to surrender or "we will come in and get you."

About 200 of the estimated 400 rioting prisoners responded to the ultimatum by surrendering, and 65 South Carolina National Guardsmen moved into the prison yard to secure the area after the other 200 quieted down.

During the height of the four-hour rampage, the prisoners battled guards with crowbars and steel pipes and set fires. At least five persons, including several guards, were injured.

The rioters began surrendering after William Leeke, 37, director of the state department of corrections, crawled atop a building with a bullhorn and shouted out his ultimatum.

* * *

Leeke said he had talked to the rioters earlier by phone and their two main grievances were food and the antiquated condition of one cellblock which houses more than 400 inmates.

The prison official said he had offered to negotiate with a committee of three prisoners and explained to them an "architectural study" to replace the century-old cellblock has begun.

Wages Up in France With Everything Else

PARIS (Reuters) — Some 15,000,000 Frenchmen got an average three per cent pay raise Wednesday under an agreement between the government and unions following last May's national strikes.

The agreement provided for an average raise of 10 per cent, seven per cent of which was paid June 1. However, rail fares went up by five per cent and telephone rentals by 20 per cent. Bread, milk, cigarettes, electricity and gas also have all gone up in price since June.

Women Burned

Damage Heavy In Gas Blast

TORONTO (CP) — Damage in a natural gas explosion early Tuesday which ripped out the side wall of a drug store and an upstairs apartment, burning two women tenants, has been estimated at $50,000.

The blast, which damaged three units of a shopping plaza on Bloor Street West near Dundas Street in suburban Etobicoke, occurred less than an hour after a construction grader apparently cut a one-inch gas service line.

Dorothy Walsh and Lorraine Chapman, burned on the face, neck and hands in the brief fire that followed the explosion, were in satisfactory condition in hospital.

C. C. Leslie, superintendent of construction maintenance for Consumers' Gas Co., said the company was called about 7:30 a.m. by the paving firm which severed the line, and gas workers had capped the leak by 8:65 a.m.

The explosion occurred minutes later, apparently after one of the injured women lit a cigarette, police said.

It knocked out a 35-by-10 foot section of the brick wall of their apartment, leaving furnishings exposed, damaged two neighboring buildings and snapped a hydro pole like a toothpick.

About 25 tenants of neighboring apartments above the row of stores fled to the street, many still wearing pyjamas.

Nude Peter Pan Play Defies Obscenity Ban

MADISON (UPI) The University of Wisconsin topless, bottomless parody of Peter Pan — featuring nude co-eds—got two more performances Tuesday night despite the obscenity brand put on it by the district attorney. There were no arrests.

Earlier in the day, Dunne County district attorney James Boll ruled the parody of the classic children's tale was obscene and could not be shown again under threat of arrest.

Boll and police Chief Wilbur Emery were present at a screening of the play Monday.

The play originally featured six nude co-eds portraying "innocence." Tuesday's version had only two altogether, and they were on stage for about eight minutes.

Stuart Gordon, a drama senior from Chicago and producer of the play, said it ==== because "the cast decided."

* * *

William Dunson, theatre program director, locked the Student Union Theatre. However, the group went to the commerce building on the campus and staged the play in a basement auditorium.

About 500 viewed the first performance and Gordon put on another show because of an overflow crowd of about 400.

"We feel the district attorney's decision is unjust," Gordon said. "No one has the right to censor a work of art except the audience. It was the best audience we ever had."

"In my opinion today's community standards do not permit girls to dance nude before an audience," Boll said. "To permit such conduct at the university would open the door to nude dancers throughout the community."

* * *

Madison ordinances do not permit nude dancing.

"This cannot be tolerated at the University of Wisconsin or any place else in Dunne County," Boll said.

There was one performance last week. The play was closed on vote of the cast who feared prosecution. It was reopened Monday for a screening by Boll and other officials to decide if it was obscene or esthetic.

* * *

Six co-eds danced in the nude in the first performance before a student-faculty audience. Four dropped out—apparently fearing arrests—and two danced before Boll and the others at the screening.

Boll warned others in the cast besides the nudes would be prosecuted if the play was repeated.

The nudes were partially hidden by a smoke machine which created a misty effect and light patterns.

* * *

Gordon said he produced the parody to show "how two persons are forced to change by society."

The ferocious Captain Hook and his pirates were portrayed as policemen, Tinkerbelle died and Peter Pan grew up in the play—all contrary to the original work by James M. Barrie.

"The play has changed radically from when I first read it as a boy," Boll said.

'Boss' Went Fishing

Not all strikes succeed. In Stockton, Calif., Mrs. Sandra Wagner, 23, picketed in front of her own home in demand for "better working conditions" from husband Tom. She wanted him to sit down and negotiate, but had to report after brief picket duty that he went fishing instead.—(AP)

King Fisherman

Cowichan Waiting for Coho

There just seems to be a no letup in the coho fishing in Otter Point-Becher Bay-Pedder Bay waters — and anglers at Cowichan Bay are looking enviously at Juan de Fuca Strait hoping the coho get around to their waters in time for the big Cowichan Bay Salmon Club coho derby Oct. 12, 13 and 14.

Some, but not many, have already arrived at Cowichan Bay, and among the lucky anglers was Ray Kerr with a 13.8-pounder at the weekend, on backtail fly.

PRIZES LISTED

The club will offer a $100 cash prize for the largest coho on each of the three days, a $50 prize for the second heaviest each day and 10 merchandise prizes and hidden weight prizes each day.

The Anchor Cafe trophy will be awarded for the heaviest coho of the three days and the new Harry Hobson Memorial Trophy will go to the highest aggregate weight of coho entered during the three days, with only one fish to be weighed each day.

Arson Case Hearing Remanded to Today

Charged with two counts involving arson to his former home, Leo R. Toutont was remanded until today after a preliminary hearing Tuesday before Magistrate William Ostler in Central Magistrate's Court.

He is charged with arson and a second count of conspiracy to commit arson. A fire at 3030 Jacklin destroyed the Toutont home about 1 a.m. April 8, 1967.

Prosecutor Cory Stolte called seven witnesses for the Crown, including mortgage holders on the property, the accused's daughter, neighbors, a police photographer and a fire chief.

□

Guy S. Irvine, 25, of no fixed address, who pleaded guilty to obtaining lodging by fraud Sept. 21, and five charges of obtaining money and goods by false pretences Sept. 24, again pleaded guilty Tuesday to three charges before Magistrate Ostler of obtaining money by false pretences under $50.

Irvine was charged as a result of writing cheques in other parts of the province on a closed bank account, court was told.

Magistrate Ostler was told by Irvine, "I've had a great deal of trouble with drinking in the past."

Magistrate Ostler told the ex-bartender, "If you have a drink problem, it would seem foolish to work as a bartender."

He remanded Irvine's case until Oct. 8 for a presentence report.

□

Robert W. Wood, 18, of CFB Esquimalt, pleaded guilty to a charge of being a minor in possession of liquor Tuesday, and reserved plea on a second charge with two counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Both cases were remanded to Oct. 8.

□

Thomas A. Boyle, 20, of 1429 Vining, who pleaded guilty Sept. 23 to a charge of attempted theft under $50, was told in court Tuesday he was a "portrait of a wretched young man headed for a wasteful life," by Magistrate Ostler.

Court was told in the earlier appearance that Boyle attempted to take $15 from a service station till to pay his back rent.

As the magistrate was pronouncing sentence, a former next-door neighbor of Boyle's interrupted court and said he had a job at Tofino for the accused.

AWAITING CALL

Magistrate Ostler asked the young man if he had a job. When he answered he did not, and was waiting for a call from the same Tofino firm, the magistrate called him "another gentleman in waiting."

Boyle's case was remanded to today for a probation officer to report on the job offer.

□

Fined for being minors in possession of liquor: Noel G. Bruneau, 18, of 633 Admirals, $20; James W. Knox, 19, and William Schnutgen, 18, both of CFB Esquimalt, $35 each.

□

Two New Brunswick men pleaded guilty to charges of vagrancy and were remanded to today for sentencing after being reprimanded for their living habits.

Harry McLaughlin, and William R. Scott, 45, both asked to be allowed to leave Victoria.

Magistrate Ostler asked them why they thought this was any solution, when they would just go to another town and be picked up on the same charge.

He called their requests "a dreary point of view" and asked, "Why should the public support you in your liquor habit?"

McLaughlin told court he had no family and was on welfare. Prosecutor Stolte told court Scott had 25 cents when arrested, and Scott said he had a wife and two children whom he did not help support.

Their cases were remanded to today so they could discuss their future plans with a Salvation Army officer.

"Perhaps he can give you some self-respect. He certainly can as much as anybody I know of," the magistrate told the two men.

CARACAS (UPI)—A bus lost its brakes on a mountain highway 350 miles west of Caracas, overturned and fell down the mountainside, killing six persons and injuring 22.

September Weather Wasn't Very Much

Weather watchers have had their suspicions confirmed. It was cooler, wetter and duller than usual in September. The one bright spot was that it was a mite less windy.

Figures released Tuesday by the weather office show that September was similar to August.

Rainfall was 1.84 inches which was .59 inches more than normal for the Gonzales station. At the airport it was 1.60 inches.

There were 20 days of measurable rain at the airport with one fewer at Gonzales. It was also a little warmer at Gonzales than at the airport. Mean temperature at Gonzales was 56.7 while at the airport it was 56.2.

Both stations recorded the same high, 76 degrees, Sept. 5.

Low temperatures of the month were 44 at Gonzales and 40 at the airport. They were recorded Sept. 20 and 21.

The sun shone for seven hours fewer than normal. It was out for a total of 201 hours at Gonzales and 196 hours at the airport.

The mean wind speed at Gonzales was 10.8 miles an hour compared to a normal for the month of 11.3 miles an hour.

Careless Contractors

Blocking, Noise Curbs Planned

The city intends sharp curbs on contractors who block roadways and sidewalks, cause excessive noise or leave equipment lying about in a way dangerous to children.

The decision was made Tuesday by council's group B committee and will have to be ratified at next week's council meeting.

The matter arose after complaints from a nearby resident about the activity of a contractor on Pandora.

In other business, the committee turned down a suggestion that McKenzie Street in Fairfield be renamed to avoid its confusion with McKenzie Avenue in Saanich.

Ald. Cecil Parrott said the city street was named long before the Saanich one, and if either should be changed, it should be the latter.

Invasion Plan Told

BONN (AP) — The Bonn government has secretly warned the Western allies of a Soviet plan to invade West Germany and Holland, the Munich newspaper Bayern Kurier reported Tuesday.

It said the warning was issued by State Secretary Karl-Guenther von Hase of the West German defence ministry in a Sept. 19 speech to the defence committee of the Western European Union.

The newspaper said Von Hase told the seven-country body the Soviet attack plan was for an opening thrust "clearly directed at Hamburg and Bremen," engulfing the entire North Sea coast of West Germany and sweeping into Holland. He was reported to have said there was firm evidence to substantiate this.

A spokesman for Defence Minister Gerhard Schroeder confirmed that Von Hase addressed the defence committee. But he added: "His speech was secret. The contents will not be published."

Volunteers Quick with Help

Selfish, Indifferent? Not Victoria People

By A. H. MURPHY

Don't tell the staff at the Volunteer Bureau of Community Information and Service that people are selfish and indifferent to the plight of others more unfortunate—they won't believe it.

Recently the organization, which works within the framework of the Community Welfare Council, put a small classified advertisement in The Daily Colonist asking for volunteer helpers for a variety of jobs.

The immediate response was 25 volunteers, and the calls are still coming in. Twenty-one of the first 25 now are giving part of their time in the service of others.

NOT SURPRISED

Mrs. D. E. Dickinson who, with the help of Mrs. Genevieve Ali, directs the bureau, was gratified but not particularly surprised.

"People do shape up when they are called upon to help," she said. "After all, we have more than 60 workers giving an average of more than three hours each a week to help their neighbors. That surely indicates good will."

The bureau acts as a referral agency—a link between the volunteers and institutions which need help.

MANY TASKS

Calls for help are received from hospitals, nursing homes, schools, clinics, libraries, clubs and any other creditable agency which is serving the community.

Volunteers select the work they are best able to do and give what they like of their time. They may be asked to type, cook, feed patients, tutor, supervise children, entertain, sew, drive a car, share a hobby, play cards or just visit.

Not all the work is pleasant by any means. It can be a pretty messy business feeding the very old or the mentally ill.

REWARDS GREAT

But, says Mrs. Dickinson, the rewards are great and the volunteers seem to find satisfaction and a real sense of achievement in the jobs given them.

It all started about two years ago when a woman came to the office of Garth Homer, community council director, and asked for some sort of volunteer work.

She was fed up with sitting around doing nothing, she said. Her family was grown up and she had time on her hands.

In that plea the organization had its roots, and within months an active group was working out of First United Church.

ORIGINAL GROUP

Members of the original group were Mrs. J. A. Andrews, Mrs. T. H. Hoskins, Mrs. Marian Mikita, William Oakley, Mrs. C. D. Smith, Mrs. C. D. Stockhill, John H. F. Turner, D. R. Wilson and Mrs. H. H. Towson.

In July the group moved into Cook Street and, with some help, unusual tasks calling for special and the provincial government welfare department, set up shop and began to recruit volunteers.

SPECIAL SKILLS

Much of of the work done is routine, but there are often desperately afraid of failing a skills.

One despairing youngster help and was supplied with a term examination, called for help and was supplied with a tutor. He got through.

An illiterate man, living in Victoria, felt that he was losing a large part of the joy of life and he sought aid. He was supplied with a teacher who taught him to read and write.

RECREATIONAL TRIPS

The Boys' Club of Victoria needed help in the office. It was supplied.

People who like to drive are used to provide recreational trips for blind people, the disabled and the aged.

The hospitals are making good use of volunteer workers and Mount St. Mary, home for the aged, always needs help in large quantities.

SOME RETIRED

Volunteers come from all levels, Mrs. Dickinson says. One wealthy man uses his car to take people for rides around the countryside. Other helpers come from the ranks of those who have retired—to early, perhaps—and need an interest in life.

Teen-agers have volunteered in surprising numbers and they are often used to work with people of their own age.

There is room for all talents and skills, the director said Monday, and more help is needed right now.

Asked about the "information" aspect of the bureau title, Mrs. Dickinson said her office supplied data about community resources in connection with health, welfare, recreation, culture and education. The number is 388-5212.

Saanich to Ask Legion:

Municipal Hall Memorial Site?

Saanich municipality will ask the Royal Canadian Legion how its members would feel if the peace memorial on Shelbourne Street were moved to the municipal hall complex on Vernon Avenue. The decision was made at a meeting of Group A committees Tuesday night.

The parks and outdoor recreation committee inspected three landscape designs for the peace memorial in Gore Park on Shelbourne Street. Commissioned from Robert Savery, they would cost $5,000, $6,500 or $8,000.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said that "if we spend this money, the area of tribute will remain on Shelbourne Street for some time."

NO RAISED HACKLES

He said he didn't want to "raise any hackles" because Shelbourne originated as a memorial avenue.

"But is our tribute to the dead of two wars any less if we transfer the memorial to the municipal hall?"

He said he felt the ceremony would be enhanced if moved to the municipal-complex area, and this should be discussed before money was spent on the present site.

LEGION REACTION

Ald. William Noel suggested asking the Royal Canadian Legion for reaction to the move.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said the ceremonies were not well attended and if you took away the officials, the Boy Scouts and other organization members who "had" to attend, there wouldn't be many left.

He said it was "pretty bleak" there on a November day and compared the outdoor Saanich ceremonies with one he had attended inside Sanscha Hall in Sidney, which was crowded "because it was comfortable."

Ald. Ed Lam suggested leaving the memorial where it is and having future Armistice Day services indoors at the new arena.

OTHER DECISIONS

Other decisions made at the meeting were:

● The finance, legislative and commerce committee recommended that next year's council consider making a grant of $3,000 to Victoria Visitors' Bureau. Grants to the bureau by Saanich have been voted down for two years. The new president of Saanich Chamber of Commerce, Alfred Pettersen, told committee Tuesday that Saanich residents derive $1,000,000 in salaries from the tourist industry.

● The same committee voted to consult with Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt on establishing a fee for rezoning applications.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

● Civil defence committee accepted the resignation of Eric Gravenor as co-ordinator and praised the "tremendous job" he did. He resigned because of his new duties as chief building inspector. A new co-ordinator is to be appointed for two years with an assistant who will take over at the end of the two years.

● Parks and outdoor recreation committee recommended that council set up contests for cleanliness of school grounds with plaques to be awarded at elementary, junior and senior high school levels.

● The same committee voted to have parks superintendent Bert Richman replan and replant the three landscaped traffic islands at the Town and Country intersection.

LESS MAINTENANCE

Mr. Richman told the committee that maintenance amounted to $5,000 a year on the three islands and he felt this could be reduced to $3,000 if they were all planted in grass.

He explained that they were originally built and planted in three rainy weeks under the direction of the Capital Improvement District Commission. There were many complaints about their design but none recently.

The replanning is to be left up to Mr. Richman's discretion.

Trudeau Didn't Ask Coure

Rossillon Affair Ignored

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said the Commons Tuesday he "didn't think to ask" about the Rossillon affair in his talk Monday with French Premier Maurice Couve de Murville in Quebec City.

* * *

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield had asked whether Trudeau received satisfactory assurance from Couve de Murville regarding Philippe Rossillon, a French government official whom Trudeau has accused of acting in an underhand manner in Canada.

The affair arose out of a visit which Rossillon made last month to French-speaking Canadians in Manitoba. Rossillon is concerned with promoting French language and culture.

Stanfield was called to order by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux when he asked whether it was correct to assume that Trudeau did not consider the Rossillon affair as important now as he did Sept. 11.

That was the day the prime minister publicly castigated Rossillon at an Ottawa news conference.

* * *

In reply to a further question by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), Trudeau said he did not consider it useful to "drag a problem everywhere he goes."

Auctioneer Waives Deal After Cross-Ring Hello

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — She had no cattle, no ranch and worst of all didn't have $1,575 to pay for the bull.

The red-faced lady explained to the auctioneer at the Bluestem National Charolais Association sale she was only waving to a friend across the ring.

"Okay," sighed auctioneer George Morse, "we'll back up and take the next lowest bid."

That, of course, was her friend across the arena, waving back.

Morse called a halt to the whole thing and delivered a lecture on sitting on your hands if you don't want to buy a bull. Then he started selling the animal all over again.

Invasion Reason

Soviet Summit Shelved

From Reuters - AP

BUDAPEST — A conference of 85 Communist parties agreed Tuesday to shelve plans for a world communist conference in Moscow next month.

The decision to postpone the meeting, apparently taken because of the Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia, was a bitter blow to the Soviet Union, which has been pushing for such a meeting for years.

The last was held in Moscow in 1957.

The conference which ended here Tuesday decided to hold another meeting here Nov. 17 to re-examine date for a new communist summit. Informed opinion was that the world meeting, which had been scheduled for Nov. 25, would be held towards the end of next year.

UNITY DISPLAY

The Russians have been urging that a meeting of Communist parties throughout the world should meet in Moscow, apparently to demonstrate unity of loyal parties despite defection of Peking.

But the occupation of Czechoslovakia apparently ran into criticism from some of the parties represented here and this left the Kremlin the choice of going ahead with little support or agreeing to a postponement to save face.

Other Reds Seek Right

ROME (Reuters) — Italian and Romanian Communist party officials called Tuesday for the right of Communist parties to decide their own political lines without outside interference.

Observers said it was a rebuke to Russia for leading the Warsaw Pact intervention in Czechoslovakia — which the Italian Communist party previously condemned.

Nahmint Plane Crash

Deadhead Dips Two

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI—Two Seattle brothers are in satisfactory condition today in West Coast General Hospital after their light seaplane crashed into Nahmint Lake, about 20 miles southwest of Port Alberni, on the weekend.

Police said the accident occurred Sunday when A. V. Harmon and Louie Harmon were on their way home after visiting the Island for a fishing trip. They left Seattle Saturday morning.

Apparently they decided to stop for some more fishing and tried to land on Nahmint Lake.

Police say that a right-hand pontoon struck a deadhead when the plane flipped and sunk. The two men managed to climb clear and swam ashore. They found a cabin where they stayed Sunday and Monday night.

* * *

A search was launched Monday and RCMP were notified that they had been found at about 2 p.m. Tuesday. By 3 p.m. a search and rescue helicopter had delivered them to West Coast hospital.

A hospital spokesmen said they were suffering from hunger and exhaustion—the pair had had nothing to eat since the crash.

Apart from scratches and contusions, the spokesman said the men were not injured.

"They had a good dinner and a shave, are now resting comfortably and are in satisfactory condition," she said.

If No Leave

B.C. Post Parker Choice

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Parker, chairman of the British Columbia mediation commission, indicated Monday he will give up his job as Yukon Territorial Court judge if the federal justice department refuses to give him leave of absence.

Both Justice Minister Turner and provincial labor minister Leslie Peterson have said Judge Parker can not hold both positions.

The judge has requested a seven - year leave of absence from his Yukon post, in order to protect his pension rights. He says he would be eligible for a federal pension of $18,500 a year when he is 61, five years from now.

ENJOYING JOB

"I don't think the federal government has said its last word yet," he said Monday.

"I know I can't continue to do both jobs and will have to make a decision. I am enjoying my job as chairman of the mediation commission."

Asked if this means he will stay with the B.C. job if the justice department does not allow his requested leave of absence, Judge Parker said, "Yes. I feel I should come here but I'll take that fence when it comes."

The judgeship carries a salary of $28,000 a year, plus pension benefits. The mediation position pays $42,500, with no pension.

Since his appointment in May to the mediation post, Judge Parker has continued to draw his Yukon salary, but has accepted only expenses for his B.C. job.

Walking with wife, William Hamilton gets cheery farewell from Jubilee staff

World Series Fan All Set Metal Vertebra His Ticket

By A. R. MURPHY

Pale and frail but erect and confident, William S. Hamilton walked out of Royal Jubilee Hospital Tuesday on his way home to put his feet up and watch today's World Series opener on TV.

The 65-year-old man entered the same hospital two months ago in great pain and in the expectation that he might spend the rest of his life in bed or, at best, in a wheelchair.

* * *

His doctors did not despair, however, and the unique operation by which he was fitted with a metal vertebra is now medical history. The landmark surgery has brought inquiries and commendations from all over North America, and from as far abroad as India.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, Jubilee executive director, said Tuesday that no one had yet contradicted the claim that the operation was unique in North America and possibly the world.

"It has excited a tremendous amount of interest, and inquiries have been pouring in from all over," Dr. Pickles said.

* * *

He added that Dr. Fouad A. Hamdi, Victoria neurosurgeon, led the surgical team of doctors and nurses which worked on the operating table for six hours to replace a diseased second lumbar vertebra with a metal prosthesis.

The operation took place on Aug. 2, Dr. Pickles added, and Mr. Hamilton had a "remarkably normal and uneventful convalescence."

The patient was sitting up and eating normally 10 days after the operation, and walking with only a little help in six weeks.

He was now walking unaided and just as though his back had never been discussed, the doctor added.

Prior to the operation the patient was dragging one foot, and indication of the build-up of the injury. The drag was now gone.

The patient was cheerful and well on his departure from the hospital Tuesday.

"I am feeling fine and I hope to lead a normal, active life from now on. And, of course, I am most grateful to the doctors and nurses who took such good care of me

Mound Masters Meet

Fear Sparks Berlin Ban

BERLIN (UPI)—The West Berlin government Tuesday moved to ban the National Democratic Party because of fears the Russians might use its alleged neo-Nazi activities as an excuse to put pressure on the city.

The senate (city executive council) authorized Mayor Klaus Schutz to ask the Western Allies to ban the extreme right-wing party.

Bed Spread Bit Much For Royalty

LONDON (CP) — The Express today splashes across page one an eight-column picture of the Queen sitting up in bed and surrounded by Royal Family members shortly after the birth of Prince Edward in 1964, despite the Queen's request they not be displayed.

The picture is one of a set obtained originally by the French magazine Paris-Match.

Their world-wide publication, says the Express, "has created an anomaly — which can only be resolved by letting the British people see them." (See Page 28)

"They are probably the most delightful pictures of the Royal Family ever taken."

Order-in-Council Ruling Challenged for Japanese

VANCOUVER (CP)—A federal order-in-council under which a Japanese - Canadian's property was sold during the Second World War was challenged Tuesday in Exchequer Court.

Lawyer Raymond MacLeod, appearing for Torao Iwasaki, 89, in a claim for $1,500,000 in compensation, held the order-in-council breached the legislation which authorized it.

Mr. MacLeod argued the 640 acres on Salspring Island owned by Mr. Iwasaki was confiscated by the federal government in 1942 under an order-in-council which stipulated that it would be held in trust for him.

However, another order, passed in 1945, authorized disposal of the land.

* * *

Mr. MacLeod argued before Mr. Justice F. A. Sheppard that the War Measures Act, which was the basis for both orders-in-council, states that no order passed under the act shall revoke any right or liability given in any previous order.

"I submit there was a right owing Iwasaki to have his property returned to him and an obligation on the Secretary of State acting as custodian to hold his property for him," Mr. MacLeod said.

* * *

The court action stems from events of nearly 25 years ago when 20,000 Japanese-Canadians were removed from the coastal areas of British Columbia as a security measure during the Second World War.

Mr. MacLeod said the land was sold in 1945 for $5,250, but Mr. Iwasaki had refused to accept a cheque for $4,838, net proceeds of the sale.

Hellyer Hears Renewal Protests

'Bulldozers Don't Build Homes'

TORONTO (CP) — Transport Minister Hellyer waved away reporters with tape recorders when he met placard-carrying protesters Tuesday while inspecting a proposed slum-clearance area in downtown Toronto with members of his housing study group. He said he wanted to have private talks with the people. He found them outspoken rather than hostile.

Signs saying "We don't want urban renewal" and "Bulldozers don't build homes" were carried by residents of the Trefann Court area which is to be razed for new housing.

* * *

Residents also protested that they have waited for years for street patching, but parts of Sackville Street, south of Shuter, were freshly paved by the city a few hours before Hellyer arrived.

Most of the tiny roof-slumping houses are 60 to 75 years old and many of them are owner-occupied. Residents complain they will not get a proper price for their buildings when they are expropriated and torn down.

Many renters said they don't want to move and they cannot afford better houses. They are fearful of being forced into public housing against their will.

Parties Helped Seamen To Forget Hardships Of Second World War

Community hall

Union Bay Club Still Serves

Story and Picture
By MARY MOORE

UNION BAY — When the directors of Union Bay Community Club met recently for the first meeting of the fall and winter season, they began the club's 30th year of continuous service in the area.

The hall in which they held their meeting was built by the original club and opened to the public May 15, 1942. Plans began in the fall of 1939 when a few men and women, who had just formed a community club, dreamed about providing a hall for the community.

HARD WORK

And they made the dream come true with enthusiasm and hard work.

Every means of raising money was used including dances, raffles and bake sales and donations were sought.

Eventually $2,000 was raised. With this demonstration of community support, Canadian Collieries (Dunsmuir) Ltd. provided a loan of $5,000.

That loan opened the way for the start of construction.

Before the club was months old, it was involved in an activity of world-wide importance.

WAR LOSSES

It was war-time and ships were being built in large numbers along the coast from California to Vancouver to replace losses from submarine warfare.

Fuel was needed and the munitions and supply department invoked a priority claim on the Union Bay coal supply.

A stream of ships sailed into Union Bay—two or three vessels a week.

SHORT STAY

Their stay in the port was short, usually 24 to 30 hours. The crews were lonely men in a strange land, many with harsh memories of attack and death at sea in the North Atlantic. All of them knew the dangers that lay ahead.

The women's committee of the Community Club, headed by Elizabeth Renwick and Kathleen Stubbs, decided that something must be done to help the men and so they decided to have a party in the hall for the crew of every ship that came to port.

They probably did not realize the size of the job they had undertaken. Ships arrived in an almost continuous stream for more than five years.

The party consisted of a concert, supper and dance. Entertainers living in the district offered their services. Talent was often found among the seamen.

Food was a problem at the start. It was a time of rationing, and housewives often gave up their own coupons to supply food for their guests.

IMPRESSIVE RECORD

The problem was solved when the Navy League of Canada became aware of what was being done. They supplied food and financed the building of a merchant marine room in the hall basement.

It was equipped with bunks, easy chairs, writing desks and showers. Residents kept it supplied with magazines and writing materials and the committee bought a piano.

Since the war, the club has continued to build an impressive record for hospitality and public service.

Activities for the new season include the rifle club, women's keep-fit classes, basketball, badminton, children's gymnasium and theatre.

Plan for Centre Praised by Ney

NANAIMO — Marine Gardens Association met with Nanaimo city council in committee on Monday.

The meeting was for information only. The association told council about work for the recreation-convention centre, proposed by the association.

The centre will house a theatre, which would be convertible from 400 seats to 800 seats. The plan would allow for comfortable use by amateurs or professional shows, council has been told.

* * *

Plans call for a total expenditure have a large auditorium and a T-shaped 25-metre pool with diving facilities.

Mayor Frank Ney said Tuesday that the project is both needed and welcome. He said it would give a new character to the Vancouver Island's central area.

"This project is something that's badly needed in the community. It's a big project. We're waiting for the association to make its first step," he said.

"There's a tremendous increase in the young people in the area and recreation is being strained more and more," he said.

Maury Loudoun, association secretary, said the meeting was for only information only, not to ask Nanaimo city for funds, land or concrete support.

"In the final analysis, it will be the area residents who will build it. The Gyros originally promoted it. The association now is doing the ground work in research to show residents realistic plans," he said.

* * *

"It's going to take everybody pulling for it — all municipalities, all groups, and all service clubs," he said.

Mayor Ney said if the project was assumed by the regional district, the mill rate "would be surprisingly small." It would relieve all areas of a recreational burden by providing one large facility instead of several small and inefficient ones.

Nanaimo Conservation Officer:

Bragging Pitlampers Not Good Hunters

By ARNOLD OLSON

NANAIMO — Pitlampers and poachers are not good sportsmen and they are not very good hunters, claims Nanaimo conservation officer.

Leo van Tine of the fish and wildlife branch, said the pitlampers are people who admit to themselves they aren't good enough to get their animals in daylight hours.

He said that he and another officer, Dennis Wilder, spend 12 to 16 hours a day during the hunting season patrolling for pitlampers and poachers.

However, the public serves as a large body of unofficial patrollers, he said. A great deal of charges are laid because of information volunteered by private citizens.

NIGHT FEEDING

"We get to know when people are enjoying seeing coveys of birds with their young. We know there's bound to be a poacher snooping around there too. We give those areas particular attention.

"We've got scores of spots to feed at night that are where deer are known to cross to feed at night that are patrolled regularly as well," he added.

"We prefer to approach suspicious persons before any shooting and scare them off first. Prevention is better than baiting people into breaking the law by letting it appear that the birds and animals are unprotected," he said.

'NO SPORTSMEN'

Mr. van Tine said the pitlamper thinks he is not being seen and that no one knows what he is doing.

He said some of them have even bragged about their ability to get game illegally and that they thought they were good hunters and sportsmen.

But that is not the case, he said.

Pitlampers are especially difficult to bring to court because they work in the quiet of the night and are hard to trap with evidence.

"Certainly pitlampers and poachers get away with animals and birds but sooner or later we'll nail them," he asserted.

"Binoculars work both ways —for the poacher and for us. He never knows for sure if a clump of trees has one of us in there watching him in action. The pitlamper's light can be seen for a long distance in the dark. It filters through branches, and fog. We watch for that little blink of light and nab the culprits on their way out of the bush—sometimes even while they're dressing their kill," he said.

"The minimum fine for pitlamping is $500 and that could buy a lot of beef."

Mr. van Tine says he understands why some hunters who are usually noted as skilled men will pitlamp. They are ashamed to admit defeat.

"It takes a good hunter, a man, to go through a season legally. He passes up shots at illegal game or shots that might only wound and he finishes the season empty-handed. He feels he has failed and he is ashamed to admit it.

"There is a great temptation to take illegal measures when it seems he is going to be skunked for the season but it takes a good man to allow himself to be skunked and take a bit of ribbing from his friends down at the pub.

'EASY WAY'

"Only the ones who really have nothing on the ball as men have to stoop to hunting at night or in parks."

"Most hunters are good sportsmen though," he added. "It's only the poor sports who find they have to take the easy way out."

No Date For Election

OTTAWA (CP) — No conclusion has yet been reached on a date for a byelection in the Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands riding, "but one is forthcoming," said Prime Minister Trudeau on Tuesday.

He was replying in the Commons to former Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker. The seat was left vacant by the death of New Democrat Colin Cameron.

Birthday Trio Celebrates

When two-year-old Monica Auterhoff celebrated her birthday Sunday, it was three-way celebration. Monica shares big day with both her grandmothers. On hand for triple event were her maternal grandmother Mrs. James Neilsohn of 449 Lampson Street, Victoria and her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Paul Auterhoff, of 502-16 North, Port Alberni. Family party was held at home of Monica's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnis Auterhoff, 1316 Exton Street, Port Alberni.—(Mary Taylor)

Chamber Told

Bad Corner Removed In Buckley Bay Work

COURTENAY — Roads and public transportation were two of the items discussed by Courtenay-Comox Chamber of Commerce when it met recently.

Road improvements are being carried out near Buckley Bay and are expected to be completed by next spring.

Ivan McMurdo, reporting as chairman of the roads committee told members that a bad corner at Buckley Bay has been cut-off and will be paved.

On the headquarters Road, a left-hand turn lane will be installed.

* * *

The Ryan Road extension continues to prompt discussion at chamber meeting and it was suggested that a caravan of cars should drive along the right of way.

Mail delivery in Courtenay has received another set-back. A letter from postal authorities has indicated that service will not commence in Courtenay, although the city now has the required number of calls.

The reason for the delay in beginning house-to-house delivery was said to be due to the federal government [illegible] program which has affected the postal department in several ways.

The annual meeting of the chamber will be held Saturday Nov. 23 in the Elk Hotel, Comox.

I. (Suzie) Lloyd was appointed chairman of the nominating committee and will be assisted by Al Rae, Bill Bailey and Doug Inkster. The election will take place at the meeting. There will be no general meeting in October.

The chamber has added its protest over the discontinuation of the CPR dayliner service from Courtenay to Victoria. Members have suggested an improved schedule.

Gold River

Legion Women Receive Charter

GOLD RIVER — The ladies auxiliary to Gold River Royal Canadian Legion received its charter at a weekend meeting.

The event was marked by a dance and smorgasbord, provided by Legion members, in the elementary school gymnasium.

* * *

About 50 visitors from Campbell River and other Island points attended. The Campbell River contingent was played in by its pipe band which also provided a concert and played for Mrs. Marie Woods, auxiliary president, when she received the charter from Mrs. Bertha Bowen, Vancouver Island north zone representative.

Mrs. Mary Winram, auxiliary secretary, said "It was a most successful evening."

It has been decided to give the proceeds from ticket sales to the community church organ fund. The auxiliary gave $100 last June for the church building fund.

* * *

North Central Vancouver Island zone of Comox presented $50 to the auxiliary for equipment.

Rev. and Mrs. Dave McKay won a pole lamp competition.

New System

School Grants Explained

NANAIMO — New government school financing and a new arrangement for area representatives were explained Tuesday at a special meeting between Nanaimo school board and rural representatives.

The B.C. financing formula puts grants on a basis of teaching units rather than approved teachers, it was stated.

A 30 to one ratio student ratio will be used in elementary units and a 20 to one ratio will be used for secondary units.

The new representative system will provide for one representative for every elementary school which has more than 200 students. It supercedes the previous 100-student figure.

BOARD POLICIES

The board told representatives that it had been concerned about voting strength in some of the districts, especially the northern area which would receive additional strength.

The attendance areas will be instituted on each new school which is built. There will 60 representatives in the 20 attendance areas. Previously there were 31 rural representatives in 12 areas.

Representatives are to chair rural electors' meetings and explain school board policies and answer questions — or obtain information for electors.

This action follows a complaint by representatives that they had insufficient duties and wanted to take part more in school board activities.

Silencer Coming For Mill

LADYSMITH—Residents who are angry about the noise from Ladysmith Forest Products sawmill may soon be soothed.

Mayor Kay Grouhel, referring to a complaint Monday, told town council that mill manager Joseph Frumento has assured her that the company is waiting for special equipment to reduce the noise.

She said: "Mr. Frumento told me the equipment, which is on its way now, will be installed late this month or in early November."

Council will advertise for a dog warden in an effort to curb a dog problem in Ladysmith.

A letter will be sent to the Union of British Columbia Municipalities executive suggesting provision of special seminars to aid elected local government representatives.

In Law

Aid Changes For Indians

DUNCAN—When Indians require legal aid in future, they will be directed to the provincial attorney-general's department.

In the past requests were handled through the Indian Affairs department.

Reporting from a recent meeting of the Cowichan Indian Band Council, new secretary Mrs. Diane Modeste said the move is a result of recent discussions with the provincial department and the Law Society of British Columbia.

Mrs. Modeste pointed out that "legal aid is now available to Indians as to all citizens, including cases where Indians are charged with murder."

Ross Modeste, band manager, was appointed to the Grants to Bands committee for British Columbia. The purpose of the committee is to study the present grants to band councils.

Ganges Competitor

Five Awards Won

FULFORD — A Ganges man won five awards at the annual fall show of the Salt Spring Island Garden Club in Fulford Hall Saturday.

J. Wallis won the C. J. Freeborn memorial trophy for chrysanthemums, the Scott and Peden trophy, the second C. J. Freeborn trophy for special club blooms. Salt Spring Chrysanthemum Society trophy for the highest total points and the National Chrysanthemum Society certificate of merit award for first place winners.

T. W. Mount won the T. W. Mount perpetual trophy for highest total points.

In the decorative section, Mrs. E. Worthington won the Garden Club challenge trophy.

M. H. Holmes, Isabella Point was awarded the Farmer's Institute challenge trophy for the best vegetable display.

In the children's section, winners were Trudy Buckley, Nancy Merston, Danny O'Donnel.

Val Simard won the prize for best Hallowe'en arrangement.

Bake Sale Planned

GOLD RIVER — Brownies and Guides in Gold River are busy preparing for a bake sale and cake walk in the shopping plaza on Oct. 4.

Mrs. D. Elliot, district commissioner says they are raising money to buy equipment to keep the girls interested in the movement and eventually to buy their own company equipment.

There are 36 Guides in Gold River and 55 Brownies, with six Brownies on the waiting list.

Band Appoints New Secretary

Mrs. Diane Modeste, newly appointed secretary of Cowichan Indian band council, watches Jim Nahanee, 21, her new clerical assistant, try out typewriter. Mr. Nahanee is from North Vancouver Indian band. Mrs. Modeste succeeds Louise Underwood who resigned recently after holding position for several years. Mrs. Modeste has been working in band office since May, 1966, as clerical assistant. She is wife of Wesley Modeste, band's community health worker. — (Klaus Muenter)

Sewage 'Yes'

Saanich Braces For Job

By DON GAIN

Saanich municipality's planning and engineering departments are shifting into high gear following the electorate's overwhelming "yes" vote Saturday for the sewerage consolidation referendum.

"The citizens have, in effect, told us to get on with the job," said planner Tom Loney.

"Our precise moves will be discussed by staff and council," he said, "and we will be moving quickly as soon as we are ready."

PHYSICAL WORK

He said an application for permission to do physical work in connection with the consolidation of the sewers would be made to the health department. "and we're not going to be slow about it."

"We have to prepare development proposals to place before council. We have informally discussed them in the past but they will now have to be presented for very full discussion by council."

BALL ROLLING

Municipal engineer Neville Life said he had already "started the ball rolling to get the schemes put together for submission to the health department."

Grants, Loans Lacking

Student Tent-In Raps Housing Shortage

By SUE MAYSE

A tent-in on the front lawn at the University of Victoria's Student Union Building is the latest development in protest of the student housing problem.

Protesting the severe shortage of decent accommodation, about 25 students spent Sunday night in eight tents assembled in a rough bivouac on the lawn.

The tent-in is not sponsored by any particular group, according to one of the students, but originated from discussion among friends.

Similar tent-ins to protest housing were staged about two weeks ago at two eastern Canadian universities, the University of Toronto, and St. Catharine's, also in Ontario.

WEEK OR MORE

The University of Victoria housing protest could last a week or more, said Mr. Van Charnell, one of the participants.

The main complaints of the demonstrators were outlined in a mimeographed statement distributed Sunday night by Jim McCumb.

"As is the case every year at this time, housing is a problem with students," it reads.

"MORE ACUTE"

"This year, due to a number of factors, the problem has become more acute. We find a situation where students have been forced to overcrowd new apartments in order to pay for high rents; some are living in even more expensive motels as far away as Colwood; some are forced into unsatisfactory boarding conditions and still others are temporarily staying with friends until they find a place."

"Only places as far away as Esquimalt, Colwood, and Sidney have reported facilities still available."

STUDENT LOANS

Part of the blame, the statement adds, should be placed on the recent policy of the federal government in cutting back the amount and number of student loans.

"This year, of all years, when summer unemployment was between 40 per cent and 70 per cent for students across Canada, the government has chosen to impose strict regulations on student loans as an attempt to balance the budget of a sliding economy," it reads.

"Furthermore, housing construction has been cut back and the increased demand for housing has only been met by landlords increasing their rent."

NO BUILDING

"The government's failure to provide grants adequate for the building of on-campus residences was also criticized.

R. R. Jeffels, dean of colleges and student affairs at the university, said he had no objection to the protest.

United Appeal Launched

'None of 24 Services Could Be Replaced

A total of $126,000 has already been donated to the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal, campaign chairman Robert Hutchison told a kickoff breakfast of volunteer chairmen Monday morning.

But it didn't "justify any feeling of confidence" on his part, he said, and there is still a long way to go before the goal of $655,000 is realized.

* * *

One reason the amount already collected is double what it was at this time last year is because the campaign was organized earlier this year, he said.

Upwards of 300 persons attended the 8 a.m. gathering in the Senior Citizens Activity Centre at Centennial Square, which launched the largest appeal for the Community Chest in Victoria's history.

* * *

Mr. Hutchison said that giving to the United Appeal is "enlightened self-interest."

"Why?" he asked. "Because the public demands the services of our 24 agencies. If these volunteer organizations cease to operate, they could not be replaced by government-run services.

"Is there a man or woman here who thinks that any of these services could be replaced by government at the same cost? Quoting Eliza Doolittle, 'Not bloody likely.'"

* * *

"Who of the literally thousands of volunteers working from cutmasters even to those cooking your breakfast this morning, would volunteer to work in this way for a government agency?

"There is no women's auxiliary working for the superintendent of child welfare. . . .

"Once you lose the volunteers from the United Appeal agencies your cost of operations will skyrocket. And let me assure you that those who give to the United Appeal are the same people who pay taxes in this country."

* * *

Mayor J. B. Cummings of North Saanich announced awards for groups who have already completed their campaigns. The T. Eaton Co. is the first commercial firm to complete. Others are the National Revenue Department's taxation department; Fort Rodd Hill National Historic Park; Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded; Public Service Commission; Red Cross Society, and Standard Oil Company.

* * *

He said the United Appeal is "in the interest of all of us, it is for the benefit of all of us and it should be supported by all of us."

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen presented the emblem of Victoria to Graham McCall, past president of the Community Chest, in recognition of distinguished service to the community.

Facelift Over Bottleneck

Victoria's biggest traffic headache—Johnson Street bridge—gets annual facelift as painters swarm along its girders Monday during city engineers' regular maintenance program to insure structure remains in top condition. Jacknife bridge, according to motorists using Esquimalt Road and Johnson Street, seems always to go up during rush hour traffic.—(William E. John)

UVic Grad Posted To War-Hit Biafra

A University of Victoria graduate who has been stationed in Ghana with the Canadian University Service Overseas for two years will be sent to war-torn Biafra on a mission of help.

Daniel Curtis, 24, of 1706 Sheridan Avenue, will be supervising the delivery of supplies brought in by UNICEF, a United Nations agency flying between the Portuguese Island of Sao Tome in the Gulf of Guinea and Biafra.

The announcement of Mr. Curtis' appointment and that of two more university graduates from eastern Canada was made Monday in Ottawa by Frank Bogdasavich, executive director of CUSO.

Tenders Opened

Tenders for reconstruction of 12.9 miles of the Lake Cowichan Road were opened by the highways department Tuesday.

The low bid among 10 tenders received was for $1,125,195.30 by the Vancouver-based firm of Jervis Inlet Gravel Ltd.

Award of the contract will be announced after bids have been evaluated, a spokesman said.

Rain Delays Paving

TOFINO—Only rain has slowed the pace of paving roads in Tofino and in Ucluelet. The provincial road to Kennedy Lake Camp, the Long Beach road, the MacLean road and streets in Tofino and Ucluelet are among the paving projects completed. A start to the paving of the highway to Port Alberni is underway.

Art Group Continues

GOLD RIVER—Members of Gold River Art Society decided to continue activities after a long discussion Monday when the group's future was studied.

It is planned to organize art shows and other activities to help promote interest in the town.

Funeral Held

CHEMAINUS — Funeral services were held Monday for Doris Lilian Morgan who died at Chemainus General Hospital following a lengthy illness.

Born at Yarpole, England in 1909 she went to Nanaimo in 1947. She had resided at Westholme for 18 years.

West Coast Fishing ★★★

Durante Considers Situation Dismal

PORT ALBERNI — West coast fishing is in a "dismal situation," says Richard Durante, MP for Comox-Alberni.

He made the comment while discussing recent legislation concerning salmon fishing limitations.

Mr. Durante said that was the reason why he thought the principle behind licence limitations was sound "and that our commercial fishermen would agree with the principles of limitations."

AVERAGE INCOME

He continued: "The federal government, through the fisheries department, must try to raise the average income of the fishermen and keep the price of fish to the consumer down. Our government must be concerned with conservation and productivity.

Mr. Durante thought that the present salmon catch, although much the same as in previous years, is costing fishermen twice as much as it did 20 or 30 years ago, because of his large investments. Consequently productivity is slipping.

PARTIAL ANSWER

Although he felt licence limitations provided a partial answer, he disagreed with part of the legislation which deals with loss of a vessel and the subsequent loss of the vessel's licence.

"I fell this is an injustice because all commercial vessels are subject to the hazards related to the industry and therefore to loss.

"I personally feel that in such cases, the fisherman concerned should automatically receive the same category licence and I have made such representation to the minister of fisheries."

Mr. Durante also urged fishermen to act promptly if they feel they have a problem regarding the new legislation.

PRIVATE BILL

He introduced a private member's bill last week to amend the Navigable Waters Protection Act.

It provides for recovery, from the owners, costs of removing wrecks, vessels, or parts of vessels which cause water pollution or constitute a danger to water fowl or marine life.

"Although the area where the Schiedyk sank was eventually boomed and the oil dispersed with solvent, in my opinion, far too much time elapsed from the time of the sinking until the time the oil pollution of the water was effectively controlled."

OWNERS' EXPENSE

"It is my intention, through my bill, to have similar incidents controlled immediately, if not by the owners, then by the proper authorities at the owner's expense" Mr. Durante stated.

Mr. Durante said the bill related to situations such as the sinking of the Ms Schiedyk. The boat sank in January, carrying quantities of diesel fuel and lubricating oil.

The tanks were ripped open and there was an oil slick, measuring about 16 miles long and 300 to 350 feet wide, said Mr. Durante.

Fish Ban Urged On All Shelves

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said Monday Canada should restrict all foreign fishing on east and west continental shelves.

He told the Vancouver Board of Trade that Canada should scrap its plans for a 12-mile fishing limit, drawn from headland to headland.

The continental shelf on the Pacific extends between 50 and 100 miles off the B.C. coast. In the east, it extends 50 to 120 miles into the Atlantic.

Mr. Davis said the continental limit theory is his own and is not federal government policy.

"A half-dozen other nations are already protecting their continental shelves and require foreign fishing vessels to be licensed before they intrude," he said later in an interview.

Mr. Davis said major objections could be expected from the United States, which probably would feel the shelf idea would restrict its military power.

"They don't want to see the continental shelf extension because it would block off their attempts at surveillance," he said.

$850,000 Development

Cowichan Valley Art Groups Support Recreation Proposal

DUNCAN — Painters and potters in the Cowichan Valley have come out in support of the proposed $850,000 recreation development which will go to the vote Oct. 26.

Members of Crofton Art Group, Maple Bay Painters and the Cowichan Valley Potters, at meetings Monday night and Tuesday morning, decided that the new recreation facilities would not only be of great benefit to their groups but would give a big boost to art.

The three groups have a total membership of about 70 people, most of whom are housewives.

They say that art is becoming more and more a way of life among many young and old people who are gaining new values through creative activity.

They feel that the recreation complex with a swimming pool and community centre, will make recreation more important not only for the sports-minded, but also for people whose interests lie in different fields.

Mrs. B. C. Weld, chairman of the recently-formed Cowichan Potters, said:

"A central workshop and showroom for the creative arts is badly needed and would equally benefit artists, children and senior citizens equally. Under the management of the recreation director, it could stimulate painting, potting, sculpting and other creative arts."

Mrs. Weld emphasized her group of about 25 people is beginning to take a more active part in the art life of the Cowichan Valley.

The group has been invited by Miss Mary Edwards to display its work in the Duncan public library from Nov. 1 to Nov. 14.

"Following this display, the pottery will go on a two-day special pre-Christmas sale at the Hobby Horse, Nov. 15 to Nov. 16. Proceeds are earmarked for equipment, hopefully, to be placed in the art room of the new recreation centre," said Mrs. Weld.

Driver Banned For 21 Days

NANAIMO — Magistrate Stan Wardill fined William Stibbards, 20, of 653 Rosehill a total of $270 Monday.

Stibbards, who pleaded guilty to both offences, was fined $35 for speeding within a municipality and $50 for crossing a double white line at 2 a.m. on Sept. 21.

He said he felt it was safe to pass a car on the Pearson Bridge at that time of day.

Magistrate Wardill also recommended that his licence should be suspended for 21 days.

The previous day he was apprehended as he came out of the Terminal Park liquor store with two bottles of wine.

He was fined $35 for being a minor in possession of alcoholic beverages and $150 for being a minor in licenced premises.

□

Another minor found in licenced premises, Joseph Steven Russell, 19, of Extension Road, was fined $150.

Magistrate Wardill told him, "The reason this is the maximum fine is because you put the licence of the hotel in jeopardy."

He was arrested in the Palace Hotel beer parlor on Sept. 25.

□

NANAIMO — Francis James Johnson, 54, of 460 Franklin Street who pleaded guilty to impaired driving, has been fined $100 and prohibited from driving for nine months.

Police told Nanaimo Magistrate's Court that Johnson's blood alcohol content was .20 per cent on one test. Fifteen minutes later it was .22 per cent.

He was apprehended in front of the Columbus Hotel Sept. 22 at 11:15 p.m. after a minor rear-end collision occurred while he was parking his car.

IWA Poll Starts

PORT ALBERNI — A referendum ballot to elect IWA regional officers has started in the up-coast area, says W. F. Allen, president of Local 1-85.

Local officers and executive have given their support to Jack Moore, present regional director, and those running as his team-mates.

Mr. Allen said that he was confident that members would clearly recognize the issues in the election and believed that Mr. Moore and his team would receive their full support.

Trudeau Didn't Ask Couve

Rossillon Affair Ignored

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday he "didn't think to ask" about the Rossillon affair in his talk Monday with French Premier Maurice Couve de Murville in Quebec City.

* * *

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield had asked whether Trudeau received satisfactory assurance from Couve de Murville regarding Philippe Rossillon, a French government official whom Trudeau has accused of acting in an underhand manner in Canada.

The affair arose out of a visit which Rossillon made last month to French-speaking Canadians in Manitoba. Rossillon is concerned with promoting French language and culture.

Stanfield was called to order by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux when he asked whether it was correct to assume that Trudeau did not consider the Rossillon affair as important now as he did Sept. 11.

That was the day the prime minister publicly castigated Rossillon at an Ottawa news conference.

* * *

In reply to a further question by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), Trudeau said he did not consider it useful to "drag a problem everywhere he goes."

Auctioneer Waives Deal After Cross-Ring Hello

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — She had no cattle, no ranch and worst of all didn't have $1,375 to pay for the bull.

The red-faced lady explained to the auctioneer at the Bluestem National Charolais Association sale she was only waving to a friend across the ring.

"Okay," sighed auctioneer George Morse, "we'll back up and take the next lowest bid."

That, of course, was her friend across the arena, waving back.

Morse called a halt to the whole thing and delivered a lecture on sitting on your hands if you don't want to buy a bull. Then he started selling the animal all over again.

Invasion Reason

SUMMIT SHELVED BY REDS

From Reuters - AP

BUDAPEST — A conference of 85 Communist parties agreed Tuesday to shelve plans for a world communist conference in Moscow next month.

The decision to postpone the meeting, apparently taken because of the Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia, was a bitter blow to the Soviet Union, which has been pushing for such a meeting for years.

The last was held in Moscow in 1957.

The conference which ended here Tuesday decided to hold another meeting here Nov. 17 to re-examine date for a new communist summit. Informed opinion was that the world meeting, which had been scheduled for Nov. 25, would be held towards the end of next year.

UNITY DISPLAY

The Russians have been urging that a meeting of Communist parties throughout the world should meet in Moscow, apparently to demonstrate unity of loyal parties despite defection of Peking.

But the occupation of Czechoslovakia apparently ran into criticism from some of the parties represented here and this left the Kremlin the choice of going ahead with little support or agreeing to a postponement to save face.

Other Reds Seek Right

ROME (Reuters) — Italian and Romanian Communist party officials called Tuesday for the right of Communist parties to decide their own political lines without outside interference.

Observers said it was a rebuke to Russia for leading the Warsaw Pact intervention in Czechoslovakia — which the Italian Communist party previously condemned.

Nahmint Plane Crash

Deadhead Dips Two

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI—Two Seattle brothers are in satisfactory condition today in West Coast General Hospital after their light seaplane crashed into Nahmint Lake, about 20 miles southwest of Port Alberni, on the weekend.

Police said the accident occurred Sunday when A. V. Harman and Louie Harman were on their way home after visiting the Island for a fishing trip. They left Seattle Saturday morning.

Apparently they decided to stop for some more fishing and tried to land on Nahmint Lake.

Police say that a right-hand pontoon struck a deadhead when the plane flipped and sank. The two men managed to climb ashore and found a cabin where they stayed Sunday and Monday night.

* * *

A search was launched Monday and RCMP were notified that they had been found at about 2 p.m. Tuesday. By 3 p.m. a search and rescue helicopter had delivered them to West Coast hospital.

A hospital spokesman said they were suffering from hunger and exhaustion—the pair had had nothing to eat since the crash.

Apart from scratches and contusions, the spokesman said the men were not injured.

"They had a good dinner and a shave, are now resting comfortably and are in satisfactory condition," she said.

If No Leave

B.C. Post Parker Choice

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Parker, chairman of the British Columbia mediation commission, indicated Monday he will give up his job as Yukon Territorial Court judge if the federal justice department refuses to give him leave of absence.

Both Justice Minister Turner and provincial labor minister Leslie Peterson have said Judge Parker can not hold both positions.

The judge has requested a seven - year leave of absence from his Yukon post, in order to protect his pension rights. He says he would be eligible for a federal pension of $18,500 a year when he is 61, five years from now.

ENJOYING JOB

"I don't think the federal government has said its last word yet," he said Monday.

"I know I can't continue to do both jobs and will have to make a decision. I am enjoying my job as chairman of the mediation commission."

Asked if this means he will stay with the B.C. job if the justice department does not allow his requested leave of absence, Judge Parker said, "Yes. I feel I should come here but I'll take that fence when it comes."

The judgeship carries a salary of $28,000 a year, plus pension benefits. The mediation position pays $42,500, with no pension.

Since his appointment in May to the mediation post, Judge Parker has continued to draw his Yukon salary, but has accepted only expenses for his B.C. job.

Walking with wife, William Hamilton gets cheery farewell from Jubilee staff

World Series Fan All Set Metal Vertebra His Ticket

By A. H. MURPHY

Pale and frail but erect and confident, William S. Hamilton walked out of Royal Jubilee Hospital Tuesday on his way home to put his feet up and watch today's World Series opener on TV.

The 65-year-old man entered the same hospital two months ago in great pain and in the expectation that he might spend the rest of his life in bed or, at best, in a wheelchair.

* * *

His doctors did not despair, however, and the unique operation by which he was fitted with a metal vertebra is now medical history. The landmark surgery has brought inquiries and congratulations from all over North America, and from as far abroad as India.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, Jubilee executive director, said Tuesday that no one had yet contradicted the claim that the operation was unique in North America and possibly the world.

"It has excited a tremendous amount of interest, and inquiries have been pouring in from all over," Dr. Pickles said.

* * *

He added that Dr. Fouad A. Hamdi, Victoria neurosurgeon, led the surgical team of doctors and nurses which worked on the operating table for six hours to replace a diseased second lumbar vertebra with a metal prosthesis.

The operation took place on Aug. 2, Dr. Pickles added, and Mr. Hamilton had a "remarkably normal and uneventful convalescence."

The patient was sitting up and eating normally 10 days after the operation, and walking with only a little help in six weeks.

He was now walking unaided and just as though his back had never been diseased, the doctor added.

Prior to the operation the patient was dragging one foot, and indication of the build-up of the injury. The drag was now gone.

The patient was cheerful and well on his departure from the hospital Tuesday.

"I am feeling fine and I hope to lead a normal, active life from now on. And, of course, I am most grateful to the doctors and nurses who took such good care of me

Fear Sparks Berlin Ban

BERLIN (UPI)—The West Berlin government Tuesday moved to ban the National Democratic Party because of fears the Russians might use its alleged neo-Nazi activities as an excuse to put pressure on the city.

The senate (city executive council) authorized Mayor Klaus Schutz to ask the Western Allies to ban the extreme right-wing party.

Bed Spread Bit Much For Royalty

LONDON (CP) — The Express today splashes across page one an eight-column picture of the Queen sitting up in bed and surrounded by Royal Family members shortly after the birth of Prince Edward in 1964, despite the Queen's request they not be displayed.

The picture is one of a set obtained originally by the French magazine Paris-Match.

Their world-wide publication, says the Express, "has created an anomaly — which can only be resolved by letting the British people see them." (See Page 28.)

"They are probably the most delightful pictures of the Royal Family ever taken."

Order-in-Council Ruling Challenged for Japanese

VANCOUVER (CP)—A federal order-in-council under which a Japanese - Canadian's property was sold during the Second World War was challenged Tuesday in Exchequer Court.

Lawyer Raymond MacLeod, appearing for Torao Iwasaki, 89, in a claim for $1,500,000 in compensation, held the order-in-council breached the legislation which authorized it.

Mr. MacLeod argued the 640 acres on Saltspring Island owned by Mr. Iwasaki was confiscated by the federal government in 1942 under an order-in-council which stipulated that it would be held in trust for him.

However, another order, passed in 1945, authorized disposal of the land.

* * *

Mr. MacLeod argued before Mr. Justice F. A. Sheppard that the War Measures Act, which was the basis for both orders-in-council, states that no order passed under the act shall revoke any right or liability given in any previous order.

"I submit there was a right owing Iwasaki to have his property returned to him and an obligation on the Secretary of State acting as custodian to hold his property for him," Mr. MacLeod said.

* * *

The court action stems from events of nearly 25 years ago when 70,000 Japanese-Canadians were removed from the coastal areas of British Columbia as a security measure during the Second World War.

Mr. MacLeod said the land was sold in 1945 for $5,250, but Mr. Iwasaki had refused to accept a cheque for $4,838, net proceeds of the sale.

Hellyer Hears Renewal Protests

'Bulldozers Don't Build Homes'

TORONTO (CP) — Transport Minister Hellyer waved away reporters with tape recorders when he met placard-carrying protesters Tuesday while inspecting a proposed slum-clearance area in downtown Toronto with members of his housing study group. He said he wanted to have private talks with the people. He found them outspoken rather than hostile.

Signs saying "We don't want urban renewal" and "Bulldozers don't build houses" were carried by residents of the Trefann Court area which is to be razed for new housing.

* * *

Residents also protested that they have waited for years for street patching, but parts of Sackville Street, south of Shuter, were freshly paved by the city a few hours before Hellyer arrived.

Most of the tiny roof-slumping houses are 60 to 75 years old and many of them are owner-occupied. Residents complain they will not get a proper price for their buildings when they are expropriated and torn down.

Many renters said they don't want to move and they cannot afford better houses. They are fearful of being forced into public housing against their will.
